Tear Gas Dissuaded Students

Guardsmen Turn Panama Marchers; 10 Are Arrested

PANAMA (AP) — Tear gas grenades stopped an attempted student march on Shaler Plaza in the U.S. Canal Zone Saturday. National Guardsmen arrested 10 demonstrators, including a ranking leftist student leader.

A strong detachment of troops quickly broke up the demonstration, on the border between the Canal Zone and downtown Panama City.

Authorities reported no other trouble in the country. In the zone, American civilian and military residents held traditional Fourth of July celebrations.

In custody was Floyd Britton, identified as the demonstration leader, and nine others.

Shaler Plaza, also known as Shaler Triangle, is one of the sites where the Panamanian and U.S. flags are flown side by side.

Foyt Wins Firecracker 400 Miler

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) —A. J. Foyt, the Indianapolis 500 winner, swept by young Bobby Isaac on the final turn of the final lap and won the sixth annual Firecracker 400 stock car race by an eyelash Saturday.

Foyt and Isaac swapped the lead nine times in the final 50 miles in as thrilling a race as the Daytona International Speedway has even seen. Isaac gained the lead with only two laps to go and it was not until they came into the home stretch chute that Foyt could edge his 1964 Dodge into the lead by a nose.

That's the way they crossed the finish line. Isaac, 26-year-old Catawaba, N.C., Dodge driver drove his car into the victory circle with Foyt and the two congratulated each other.

Third place went to Jim Pardue of North Wilkesboro, N.C., a Plymouth driver.

The average speed was a low 151.451 miles per hour, brought about by five caution flags.

One of the yellow flags came out when Ken Spikes of Cordele, Ga., lost control on the fourth turn and slammed into the inside retaining wall. He was taken to a hospital with a fractured left leg, multiple abrasions and three broken fingers.

It was the only major accident of the day.

Strike-Averting Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for American Airlines and the Transport Workers Union reached a strike-averting agreement Saturday, the National Mediation Board announced.

Bill Authorizing Food Industry Probes Signed by Johnson

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson has signed into law a bill authorizing an inquiry into practices and problems of the food industry as they affect consumers.

Johnson selected Marvin Jones, retired chief judge of the U.S. Court of Claims in Washington, to head the inquiry as chairman of a 15-member commission.

The commission—other members will be announced later—will look into such things as the spread of prices between what farmers get and consumers pay, packaging, labeling, distribution and chain-store operations.

Wallace Bids For Support In Missouri

Broadens Campaign To Include Some States In Midwest

ATLANTA (AP) — Gov. George Wallace of Alabama broadened the scope of his presidential campaign drive with a bid for support in the North and Midwest as well as the South.

He said he has "definite, concrete" plans to get on the ballot if he can in states like New York, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Wisconsin.

And in the South, he added Florida and Kentucky to the states where he prtviously had said he would seek to gain control of the presidential election with his unpledged elector movement.

"Conservatives of this nation constitute the balance of power in presidential elections," Wallace said in a prepared Fourth of July speech, "and I am a conservative."

The Alabama governor denounced the new civil rights law as a "fraud, a sham and a hoax," and vowed anew to have nothing to do with its enforcement in his state.

"The liberal left-wingers have passed it," he said. "Now let them employ some 'pinknik' social engineers in Washington to figure out what to do with it."

In a speech for a rally sponsored by the American Patriots, Wallace also accused the U.S. Supreme Court of chipping away at freedom and supporting tyyranny for 10 years.

"It is perfectly obvious from the left-wing liberal press and from the left-wing law journals that what the court is saying behind all the jargon is that they don't like our form of government," he said.

Wallace said it is easy to predict the Supreme Court's opinions.

He emphasized he was not calling the Supreme Court justices Communists, "but I do say that every single decision of the court in the past 10 years which related in any way to each of these objectives has been decided against freedom and in favor of tyranny."

Greek Army Alerted

ATHENS (AP) — Greece's armed forces have been placed on a 48-hour state of alert for Sunday's nationwide municipal elections. A government spokesman said the military alert was a routine measure similar to that taken during the general elections.

Base Workers Missing 2 Days

2 Men Found Dead Near Knob Noster

Two Whiteman Air Force base construction workers were found dead about 7:30 Friday evening in a trailer home about a mile west of Knob Noster. The two are: Paul Coombs, Springfield, construction foreman for the Southwest Engineering Co., and Clyde Hostetler, a laborer for the same firm.

Both men were about 40 years of age according to Sheriff William O. Fortney, Johnson County Sheriff.

Cause of death had not been determined as The Democrat-Capital went to press. Sheriff Fortney said the possibility of asphyxiation had not been ruled out.

The two men left their jobs Wednesday evening at the air base to work on an air conditioning unit for their trailer home and when they did not return to the job Thursday or Friday, Frank Harcourt and Rod Lubben, both employes of the engineering firm went to the trailer and discovered the bodies.

Sheriff Fortney said one body was on a divan and the other on the bed, as if the two men had retired for the night. The sheriff said there was no indication of violence but his investigation was continuing.

Both men were married. Coombs was reported to have lived in Springfield where he has a wife and three children. Hostetler, a resident of Rogersville, a Springfield suburb, was the father of five children.

The bodies were taken to the Brauningers Funeral Home in Warrensburg.

Youth Held In Slaying At Unionville

UNIONVILLE, Mo. (AP)— A farm youth was slain Friday night in an unexplained shooting for which a 13-year-old boy was held after an all night search for him.

The Missouri Highway Patrol and the Putnam County sheriff's office said Michael Zane Peterson, 21, was killed at his farm home near the New Town community. No motive was established at once.

The authorities said the 13-year-old boy is from Sioux City, Iowa, was visiting at the Petersons' home and, still armed with a rifle, ran away after the shooting.

The boy, afoot, was taken into custody on U. S. 131 at 4:30 a. m. today five miles west of Unionville, more than nine hours after the shooting. He was brought to Unionville where a juvenile officer took over the case. The boy's name was not released.

Seventeen -year - old Kristy Anne Pearce of Princeton told authorities she went from the living room to the kitchen of

Appeal for Turkey, Cyprus To Work Toward Peace Goal

Application of the Law

Civil Rights Bill Versus Businesses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here in question-and-answer form is an explanation of how the new civil rights law applies to various businesses:

.Q What parts of the law have a direct effect on business establishments?

A. Two parts, one banning discrimination in places of public accommodation and the other in hiring, firing and other employment practices.

Q. What is meant by places of public accommodation?

A. Establishments offering food, lodging and entertainment to the public. This includes restaurants, cafeterias, lunchrooms, lunch counters, soda fountains, inns, hotels, motels, theaters, motion picture houses, concert halls, sports arenas, and other places of exhibition or entertainment.

Q. What about tourist homes?

A. If a tourist home or a rooming house is occupied by the owner as his residence and not more than five rooms are for rent, it is exempt from coverage.

Q. Does the ban on discrimination apply to gasoline stations?

A. Yes.

Q. What about a department store?

A. A department store is not specifically covered, but if it has any covered establishment within its premises, it is — for example, if it has a restaurant or a lunch counter.

Q. Does this work the other way around so that a shop in a covered estatblishment is brought under the law?

A. Yes, beauty shops and barber shops are not specifically covered, for example, but they are if they are in a hotel.

Q. What kind of discrimination is prohibited?

A. The law provides that all persons shall be entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges and advantages in places of public accommodation "with-

World News Glimpses

LONDON (AP)-- Soviet Premier Khrushchev will confer with other Communist-bloc leaders in Warsaw later this month on the Moscow-Peking split, informed sources said Friday.

However, the gathering would be smaller than the worldwide meeting of Communist party chieftains reportedly sought by the Russians to press their arguments against the Red Chinese.

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, Roman Catholic primate of Hungary, may soon end his long exile in the U.S. Legation in Budapest, informed sources say.

The informants reported Friday that progress in the prolonged negotiations in Rome between Hungarian and Vatican officials on the future of the church in the Communist country. They said a settlement "appears to be in sight."

An understanding is said to have been reached to settle such key issues as the nomination of new bishops for vacant sees, freedom of religious education, and a successor for Cardinal Mindszenty.

With the settlement of these problems, Mindszenty would be allowed to depart from Hungary probably to take a seat on the Vatican Curia. He sought asylum in the U.S. Legation during the Hungarian revolution in 1956.

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish Foreign Minister Adam Rapacki and other high officials attended an Independence Day celebration at the U.S. Embassy Friday, apparently suppressing their annoyance at Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Ranking Polish officials had been expected to boycott the embassy party to emphasize their chagrin at Kennedy's activities here this week. Kennedy aroused such spontaneous public enthusiasm his visit overshadowed the welcome for Yugoslav President Tito, a state guest.

Uncertainty Of Covering The President

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—The refrain that goes "who knows where or when" is becoming a sort of theme song for President Johnson's fellow travelers.

The President is here in Texas as spending a few days at his ranch over the Fourth of July. There were reports he might have a boating party on the holiday or join in the fun at the country fair grounds at Fredericksburg, as he has done in the past.

But nobody seemed to know.

This wasn't unduly surprising.

After all, a good many of the scores of people who move when the President moves didn't know when they were coming to Texas and don't know when they're going back to Washington. The White House press office said it didn't know either.

And it has been that way on other trips.

In any event, for this one, press secretary George Reedy announced it only at the moment that Johnson's helicopter whirled off the south lawn of the White House Thursday night.

But somewhere there had been some intuition, because baggage and all the office and other equipment the White House takes along had been going aboard a truck for some time. And there was Johhson's little Jetstar all ready to soar when he arrived at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington to head for Texas.

The Jetstar holds 10, plus crew. But a host of White House staff members, plane crews, Secret Service agents, newsmen, photographers and others go when the President goes, or as soon afterward as they can.

Truck Through 'Wall'

BERLIN (AP) — Four East Berliners escaped to the West Saturday by ramming a truck through the barbed wire barricades on the West Berlin border, police reported.

East border guards fired two bursts from tommy guns at the truck. But the fugitives, including an 18-year-old girl, scrambled through the demolished

Acheson Sent to Geneva To Help Resolve Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has announced that former Secretary of State Dean Acheson will fly to Geneva today to President Johnson's request to assist in any way he can in efforts "to resolve the Cyprus crisis."

Acheson will leave Washington early Sunday morning. His assignment is to be available in Geneva to give a hand to the United Nations mediator who will be starting talks next week with Greek and Turkish representatives on the Cyprus dispute.

Acheson, it was learned, has no fixed plans or program following his arrival in Geneva except he will confer at some early point with the U.N. mediator Sakari S. Tuomioja of Finland.

Meanwhile, President Johnson has sent new appeals to the prime ministers of Greece and Turkey to undertake direct negotiations.

The text of the State Department announcement:

"At the request of President Johnson, Mr. Dean Acheson will fly to Geneva Sunday where he will be available on behalf of the United States Government to provide any assistance that may be appropriate in helping to resolve the Cyprus crisis."

Acheson, who built up great prestige in the Truman Doctrine days in Greece and Turkey, will be Johnson's voice at this meeting.

In general, his mission will be to try to find a way of breaking the bitter Turkish-Greek deadlock over Cyprus that threatens to drive the two NATO allies into war.

Administration officials are described as believing the hot situation is approaching a flash point, with both sides pouring arms into the Mediterranean island, and that negotiations must be hurried before there is an explosion.

Sakari S. Tuomioja of Finland, U.N. mediator for Cyprus, is already in Geneva to hold the talks with Greece and Turkey.

Warren E. Hearnes

Hearnes Tour Of County Set Monday

Secretary of State Warren E. Hearnes, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, is making a visit and tour of Sedalia and parts of Pettis County Monday. It will be the start of a busy week for Hearnes whose schedule for the week calls for visits and speeches in nine counties included in which are Callaway, St. Louis, Adair, Macon, Jefferson, Lincoln, Audrain and Franklin.

He will arrive in Sedalia about 9 o'clock at Bothwell Hotel, and first visit officials at the courthouse. He is to visit the Town and Country Shoe Co., at 10 o'clock and from there go to the Lamy Manufacturing Co., about 11 o'clock. At noon hour Hearnes will have lunch at the Pacific Cafe where he hopes to meet friends, and will go from there to the Central Missouri Sales Co., on South U. S. Highway 65 where he will be introduced by D. J. Jobe and give a short talk.

He hopes to make a short visit to Houstonia, and will be at LaMonte at 2 o'clock to meet friends and supporters at Jerry's Snack Bar where visitors will be served coffee. He will be at LaMonte until about 2:45 o'clock and drive back to Se-

Soviet Brass Attends 4th Reception

US Ambassador To Moscow Receives Soviet Leaders

MOSCOW (AP)—The highest-ranking Soviet Cabinet ministers in town attended the U.S. ambassador's Fourth of July reception Saturday.

First Deputy Premier Alexei Kosygin and First Deputy Foreign Minister V. V. Kuznetsov spent more than half an hour in amiable conversation with Ambassador Foy D. Kohler.

Premier Khrushchev, who is en route home from a Scandinavian tour, and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, who never attends such receptions because of protocol, sent a telegram to President Johnson. It conveyed congratulations on the American national day.

The reception attracted 683 persons, embassy officials said.

Kohler, in a speech filmed for Moscow television, told Russians that "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" are basic rights.

He recalled these words in the American Declaration of Independence and others which say that governments derive "there just powers from the consent of the governed."

Kohler, speaking in Russian, said he was sure the Soviet people share these basic aspirations.

The ambassador pointed out that the new U.S. civil rights law was passed after debate, "publicly, open to the eyes of the world, and with due regard for the processes of law."

Warsaw Bids For Aid On Big Program

Chamber of Commerce representatives from a number of area cities have been invited to meet at the Community Building in Warsaw Monday night with that town's Chamber of Commerce members on President Johnson's proposed visit in connection with Kaysinger Dam ground-breaking Chamber president Avis Burton took swift action early last week, following a strong suggestion from Land O Lakes executive secretary Crump Taylor that other cities be asked to participate.

"It's not only the courteous thing to do," said Taylor, "but his presidential visit could entail planning and work of such magnitude that you're going to need some outside help."

President Burton has sent out a letter to Chamber presidents in this area asking them to attend Monday's meeting and to be ready to suggest names of residents from their cities who could serve along with Warsawians on the various committees.

Meeting time is 7:30 p.m. at the Warsaw Community Building.

Cities invited to participate include Lincoln, Cole Camp, Ionia, Sedalia, Warrensburg, Clinton, Pleasant Hill, Harrisonville, Windsor, Butler, Rich Hill, Nevada, Eldorado Springs, Stockton, Osceola, Bolivar, Hermitage, Schell City, Appleton City, Deepwater, Montrose, Camdenton, Versailles, Eldon, Stover, Lowry City and Springfield.

A similar letter went to Lew Paramore of the Mississippi Valley Association to the executive director of the Lake of the Ozarks association and to the office of Missouri Governor John Dalton.

Barry Omits Rights As Big Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, who fought the civil rights law, said Saturday that whites or Negroes who take to the streets "in violation of the law dishonor their causes" and "defame this nation."

But a canvass of the views of Goldwater and Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton, showed Goldwater omitting civil rights from his list of probable major campaign issues.

Scranton, on the other hand, named "progress in equal rights" as among the main campaign issues, and called the new law an "essential step forward."

The front - running Arizona senator and his foremost challenger for the Republican presidential nomination answered questions on campaign issues submitted by The Associated Press.

Goldwater's office said the senator's answers to the AP questions were taken directly from published statements and recent speeches.

Here are the two candidates' stands:

Q. How would you improve the Social Security system?

SCRANTON:

I am a firm advocate of the Social Security system which has brought enormous assistance to literally millions of Americans. I am in complete disagreement with Sen. Goldwater's proposal that participation in the Social Security system be made voluntary. This would wreck the Social Security system through the worst kind of fiscal irresponsibility. I favor fiscal irresponsibility. I favor liberalizing the Social Security system along lines proposed by Republican leaders in Congress.

Particular attention should be given to the need for bringing more widows under coverage of the system and extending "childs' benefits" up to the age of 21, provided that such children are attending school or college.

GOLDWATER:

I favor a sound Social Security system and I want to see it strengthened. I want to see every participant receive all the benefits this system provides. And I want these benefits to be paid in sound 100-cent dollars. Protecting the value of the benefits is a basic necessity.

Q. Should the United States support or take part in an armed attack on North Viet Nam? What steps would you propose for solving the Southeast Asian problems?

SCRANTON:

Under the policies of the present administration our position in Southeast Asia has deteriorated. This pattern began with the agreement to "neutralize" Laos.

Our Southeast Asian policy has not simply been bad—the fact is that we have had no Southeast Asian policy.

While development of such a policy should be based on intelligence materials that are not available to me, even from the ouside it is clear that our efforts have been weak and indecisive. We must guarantee the territorial integrity of the Republic of Thailand. We must do what we can to save the situation in Laos, even at this late date.

We must give all practical support to efforts by the South Vietnamese to end the use of Laos, Cambodia and North Viet Nam as privileged sanctuaries. We must insist on progressive policies by the present government of South Viet Nam, and make our support for this government unmistakably clear.

We dare not yield the position of freedom in Southeast Asia.

GOLDWATER:

The policies we have been following there for the past several years have been proven to be inadequate.

I predict that if these policies do not change we'll be fighting in Viet Nam for a decade. And, at best, we'll end up with a draw or a slow defeat.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has made five trips to Viet Nam. This is the third government they're on over there. But our casualties continue. But still the invaders, the Viet Cong, operate from a privileged sanctuary.

If, tomorrow afternoon, we ran every guerrilla in South Viet Nam back to the north, we still wouldn't have settled any-

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Our 12-year-old daughter Diane is an only child. Because of my husband's work we must go out socially at least three evenings a week.

Our neighbors have a 17-year-old son who is eager to earn some spending money. For the last several months we have had this boy sit with Diane. It seemed like a perfectly splendid idea—until recently.

When my husband and I came home Saturday night at about midnight, Diane was not in her bed. She was in the bathroom with the door locked. We pounded on the door until she let us in. The poor girl had fallen asleep, she had taken her pillow and blanket and made a bed for herself in the bathtub.

We finally got an explanation out of her. Diane's bedroom door has no lock and she is afraid of the boy. She gave us her word that he had never done or said anything wrong — but she was "afraid he might."

We don't want to be unfair to the boy, Ann. What should we do? We believe Diane was telling the truth. Thank you.—CONCERNED PARENTS.

Dear Parents: The boy may be perfectly fine in every respect, but it is apparent that Diane is not comfortable with him.

Get a girl siter—a big sister substitute. The boy, of course, need not be told the reason for the change.

Dear Ann Landers: Ten years ago my husband took his older brother, Manny, into his business because his mother begged him to. Manny ruined their father's business which was left to him and he then went through most of the money left to his mother. I don't know how else to describe him except to say he is one of these pepole who knows everything and has never been wrong in his life.

My husband sold Manny 25% of the business for $10,000 which he "borrowed" from his mother. To listen to him you'd think my husband was working for him.

Last month Manny took his nit-wit son (age 22) into the business and is calling him sales manager. He did this without consulting anybody.

My husband is getting ulcers from all this. He feels guilty because brothers are supposed to love each other. Legally he can throw them both out but he is afraid it might harm the family relationship. — SPLITTING HEAD.

Dear Head: The family relationship sounds pretty shaky right now. What's to harm?

I hope your husband will buy Manny's 25% back even if he has to pay a lot more than he thinks he should.

Don't feel guilty. Relatives who feed from a common trough frequently have hostile feelings toward one another although they present a beautiful picture of solidarity to outsiders. (If the boys get along well, their wives don't — etc.) OF course there are exceptions, but they are as rare as sand flies in Siberia.

Ann, Honey: I read your column every day and I hope you won't take seriously that letter from "Sugar and Spice." He was the old meanie who criticized you for calling your readers "Buster," "Butter-Cup," "Petunia," "Lambie Pie" and a few other cutesy wootsy names.

I am at least twice your age, Doll, and so far as I am concerned, your column is refreshingly down-to-earth. Please don't ever change. You can call me "Buddy Boy" anytime you want to and I hope it is real soon.—LOUISVILLE SALT AND PEPER.

Dear Louisville: Thanks for those kind words, Buddy Boy. See—you didn't have to wait long.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

'Rawhide' Just Keeps Rolling On

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Other Westerns may attract more fuss and higher ratings, but "Rawhide" just keeps rolling along.

You might call it the quiet Western. In fact, I did, and co-star Clint Eastwood agreed.

"We started in midseason six years ago last January," he said, "and nobody really expected us to last. That was at a time when there was something like 26 Westerns on television, and they were beginning to die off like flies. But we just kept going along in our own quiet way and we've managed to survive.

"How have we done it? I don't know exactly. Maybe it's because we've always worked hard for authenticity. Ours is an open-country show, as compared to other Westerns which are town shows. 'Rawhide' is fundamentally about cowboys, and each year we get awards for our portrayal of the Western heritage.

"Perhaps the viewers sense that authenticity. At any rate, they are remarkably loyal."

Indeed they are. The "Rawhide" fans set up a yowl when the show was moved from its traditional Friday night niche to Thursday. It racked up reasonable ratings considering it opposed longtime Thursday fixtures like "Dr. Kildare," "The Donna Reed Show" and "My Three sons." Meanwhile, CBS Friday ratings took a dive.

CBS has shown a preference to switch rather than fight, and "Rawhide" will settle back to its Friday night time next season.

There are indications "Rawhide" won't be so quiet next year. Eastwood confirmed reports that the budget has been raised to lure stars like John Wayne, Natalie Wood, James Stewart, and others who don't play the guest-star circuit.

If the new deal is successful, "Rawhide" may continue its journey indefinitely, as "Wagon Train," "Bonanza" and "The Virginian" appear to be doing.

Akkadian, including both Assyrian and Babylonian, is the oldest Semitic language.

STATE REPRESENTATIVE

Primary Election, August 4

If nominated and elected, I will work for and support legislation to achieve these results:

Good primary and secondary road system for Pettis County and Central Missouri. A fair share from state funds for road and highway improvements under our present tax structure.

Economic development of our state, and particularly of Pettis County and our Central Missouri area with the goal of jobs for all Central Missouri citizens.

Water conservation and anti-pollution of our streams and impoundments.

Fair share allotment of school and educational funds for Pettis County in accordance with legal entitlement apportionment.

Agricultural programs which will provide an adequate return to our farm families for their farm production.

A declining income tax schedule for citizens 65 years or older.

Good government, without waste, within our present tax structure — NO TAX INCREASE.

EVERYBODY'S GOING TO C.W. FLOWER CO.

Washington Capsules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, today hailed the civil rights bill as a "good bill, a comprehensive bill, a useful bill," but warned it will not stop demonstrations.

"The people will be marching in the streets and picketing and protesting as they were before the bill was passed," the Negro leader said in a radio interview for the Voice of America.

Wilkins said the NAACP is trying to create a "climate of compliance" which, he said, is better than a "climate of chip-on-the-shoulder approach."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy's chief oceanographer, Rear Adm. Edward C. Stephan, says that in about a year American divers will submerge 600 feet to the floor of the continental shelf, the 100-fathom curve that drops off the major land masses of the world.

And Stephan also said Friday that divers Jon Lindbergh and Robert Stenuit's successful campout 425 feet down on the ocean floor five miles northwest of Great Stirrup Cay in the Bahamas opens the way to the manned exploration and exploitation of submerged regions.

Sgt. York Remains Under Observation

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sgt. Alvin York, Medal of Honor winner in World War I, will not be going home from the hospital for the July Fourth weekend.

York, 76, was being prepared for the return trip to his Pall Mall, Tenn., home Thursday when doctors noticed he had a slight fever. They decided to keep him under observation for several days.

York was admitted to the hospital June 19 for internal bleeding. He has been hospitalized 10 times in the past two years.

Young Women Tell WSCS Of Youth Program

Karen and Donna DeMott spoke on the youth program of the Methodist Church at the July 2 meeting of Women's Society of Christian Service of Epworth Methodist Church at the church. They told what the program does for the church and made suggestions about what the church can do for youth. Mrs. Virgil Corson, program chairman, introduced the speakers.

Miss Karen DeMott attends Central Methodist College, Fayette, and discussed the church and youth on the college level. Miss Donna DeMott is a Smith-Cotton High School student. She is a member of Methodist Youth Fellowship, and spoke of high school church members and activities of MYF.

Mrs. Charley Hurtt presided. The hymn, "Give of Your Best to the Master," was sung by the group, accompanied by Mrs. Hugh Jones.

Mrs. Oma Cox, Sunshine chairman, was presented a life membership pin for her work in the society. Presentation was made by Mrs. Herman Keitle.

Lots of Hotel Rooms

NEW YORK (AP) — Daniel C. Hickey, president of New York's Hotel Association, says there'll be plenty of hotel rooms available for the rest of the summer.

He noted Friday that there had been overcrowding in the past few weeks, due principally to the annual crush of clothing buyers, who this year brought their families and stayed longer to see the World's Fair.

Hickey said that Thursday night 70 of the largest midtown Manhattan hotels were a third vacant.

Julius Stohr Marks 35th MPSC Year

Julius Stohr, merchandise salesman for the Missouri Public Service Company at Sedalia, has received his 35 year service button.

Stohr started work for City Light and Traction Company in Sedalia (later purchased by Missouri Public Service Company) as serviceman helper. This was in June 1929. One and one-half months later he was transferred to the Engineering Department as "Readiness-to-Serve-Checker" and was used as an extra street car operator. In the fall of 1929 he became floor salesman, and in the spring of 1930 outside salesman in Territory No. 2.

Stohr told MPSC that his first efforts were to sell wiring jobs to homes not using electricity, as well as to sell electric and gas appliances, which consisted chiefly of irons, toasters, ranges and cleaners. Gas was used for cooking and a few customers used gas for water heating with a side-arm heater.

In the early fall of 1930, when natural gas was introduced to Sedalia, Stohr made an extensive canvass of his territory to promote the use of gas. At that time he said the company had about 2,000 gas customers with only one customer using gas for heat.

Promotions in the early days went from free trial to renting appliances, with all rent paid to apply on the purchase price if the customer decided to buy, with terms up to five years to pay. This was true in both gas and electric appliances, especially refrigeration, as the big job was to sell electric refrigeration over ice. Stohr said they even installed meters on refrigerators to show how little it cost to operate them.

Stohr said that he had watched the company grow from the time when there was less than a half dozen refrigerators in Sedalia. He also saw the electric radio introduced as well as the mazda lamp.

Mr. and Mrs. Stohr have three children: A son, Donald, who is an attorney and assistant counselor of St. Louis County, also chairman of St. Louis County Republican Central Committee, and committeeman from Creve Coeur township, is married and has four daughters; a son, Richard, who is an attorney and electrical engineer with Monsanto Chemical Company, St. Louis; a daughter, Eileen, of the Sedalia home, who is with the Travel Department of AAA of Missouri. Stohr's wife, Margaret, is credit clerk, Sears, Roebuck and Company.

Stohr is a member of Sedalia Chamber of Commerce (served as director 1958 and 1959); member of Knights of Columbus and Sacred Heart Catholic Church; treasurer of Holy Name Society, Sacred Heart Church and served on Board of Trustees of that church; activities chairman, Lake of the Ozark Council, Boy Scouts of America; he is the recipient of the Silver Beaver Award, B.S.A. 1954; he has been a registered scouter for 37 years and is a member of the Executive Board, Lake of the Ozarks Council; he has served twice on the United Fund Board.

20 Moniteau 4-H Members Attend Annual Camp

Twenty 4-H members from Moniteau County attended the annual MCMO 4-H Camp at Camp Clover Point, June 27-30.

This was the 27th annual camping period for Cole, Osage, Miller, Morgan and Moniteau Counties. The purpose of the camp is to assist boys and girls in learning how to get along with others; give training in developing leadership and assuming responsibility. Classes included hunter safety, water safety, archery, electric safety, swimming instructions and woodcraft.

Special programs included the candlelighting ceremony directed by John Inglish, Moniteau Valley 4-H club junior leader.

Leaders from Moniteau County who attended were Miss Mae Steinger; Mrs. William Porter, community leader of Moniteau Valley 4-H Club; and Mrs. Viola Smith, extension home economist.

Members of 4-H attending camp were: Patty Porter, Judy Wolf, Deanna and Carolyn Rohrbach, Valerie and Diana Kilgore, Betty Moore, Patty Hainen, Ted Ciolli, Joyce Ann Irey, Ann Kibbe, Sandra Ciolli, Stephen Ciolli, Robert McKee, John Inglish, Wilfred Hegg, Robert and Dale Miller, Keith Dahler and Glenn Sappington.

NEW PASTOR — The Rev. Charles B. Cheffey became the new pastor of First Methodist Church, effective May 30. He and his family, consisting of his wife, Jennie, and children, Ruth 15, Mary, 14, John, 11, and Mark, 4, are residing in the parsonage furnished by the church at 600 West Third. Mr. Cheffey received his bachelor of divinity degree from Garrett Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill. While a student there, he served as pastor of Grace Methodist Church, Danville, Ill. He served rural churches while a student at Southwest Missouri State College, Springfield. The Cheffeys come to Sedalia from Kansas City, where Mr. Cheffey was minister of College Heights Methodist Church for five years. He had prior pastorates at Pleasant Hill, Eldorado Springs, and Hume, Mo. (Sedalia Democrat - Capital Photo)

Bob Hunter Believes In Advertising

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—When it comes to advertising, Bob Hunter believes in it.

Hunter, who is vice president of an outdoor advertising firm, also is a taxpayer. He believes in that, too.

But he also believes the government should at least say thanks.

Hunter believes in the latter so strongly that he wrote Mortimer Caplin, commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, and suggested that taxpayers should be given thank-you notes.

Hunter says he received no word from Caplin—not even an acknowledgement of the suggestion. So, Hunter took 10 billboards to express his sentiment.

Each billboard carries this message:

"Dear Mr. Caplin: Why not send thank-you notes to taxpayers?" The message is signed, "A Warmhearted Suggestion."

Hunter expressed his views on the matter in an interview: "The campaign is based on the American business tradition of saying thank you for money received when it is payment of a debt.

"When we realized the Internal Revenue Service does not normally send out thank-you notes to acknowledge tax receipt, we felt Mr. Caplin might want to consider the practice."

If the government does not want to send the thank-you notes separately, Hunter says they could be included in the tax forms the IRS sends taxpayers at the end of each year.

"This would create a kind of prepaid thank you," he said.

Plans Monday Picnic

A picnic supper for American Legion Post 16 and Auxiliary and their families will be held at 6:30 p.m. Monday at the north shelterhouse at Liberty Park. Food and table services are to be taken. In case of rain, the picnic will be held at the American Legion Building.

About Town

Mrs. Truman Huff, 1201 South Montgomery, and Mrs. Elsie Burgenger, 404 East Second, have returned from a two week vacation in California and Colorado. They visited Mrs. Huff's son, Arthur Eugene Huff, Mrs. Huff and family, Wilmington, Calif., and Mrs. Huff's brother, Lawrence Meyer and son, Rodney, Hawthorne, Calif. In California, they visited Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm, Farmer's Market, a television studio and Movieland Wax Museum. Mrs. Huff and Mrs. Burgenger visited in Colorado with Mr. and Mrs. James Huff and family of Denver.

Dr. and Mrs. Lowell Glaze, 620 West Fourth, have returned from a 3,000 mile motor trip in north central states and Canada. They visited International Falls and Fort Frances, Ontario, enroute to Kenora, Ontario, through the Lake of the Woods area. They drove to Winnipeg and west to Brandon, Manitoba, and south by way of International Peace Gardens.

In Ranks With Area Servicemen

George E. Essex, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd E. Essex of 3601 South Grand, Sedalia, is undergoing two weeks active duty recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

He is studying naval history and organization, customs and courtesies, ordnance and gunnery, seamanship, damage control, first aid, swimming and sentry duty. A vigorous physical fitness training program rounds out the training.

Upon completion of the training, he will return to his local reserve unit for regular training sessions.

Major Gets Penn.State Doctorate

Major Cecil Mark Richardson, chief, plans branch, DCOP, 351st Strategic Missile Wing, Whiteman AFB, received his doctoral degree from Pennsylvania State University on June 14.

The officer's doctorate in education was the result of five years' study in off duty hours. He earned his Bachelor of Science and Master of Science degrees from Texas College of Arts and Industries.

A career Air Force officer with 17 years' service, Major Richardson was chief of missile training at Whiteman prior to his current assignment in plans. He has been stationed here two years.

Born in Norman, Oklahoma, Major Richardson's background includes experience as an instructor with the Agricultural department, Texas College of Arts and Industries; instructor, Veteran's Agriculture Training program, Wilson County, Texas; one of 13 staff Explorer officers for the Air Force in the Boy Scouts of America program; personnel services officer, Headquarters Pacific Air Forces Command, Hawaii; Assistant Professor of Air Science, Pennsylvania State University.

His wife, Mary, who earned a Bachelor of Arts degree from Pennsylvania State, attended the graduation ceremonies with her husband. The couple has two children, Lee, 15, and Lynn, 13.

Jaycee Wives Will Assist At Therapy Center

At the June meeting of Jaycee Wives, June 30, at Bothwell Hotel, it was decided members would assist Children's Therapy Center July 6-10 at its children's camp to be held at the Girl Scout Camp Sakajawea on the Green Ridge Road, by providing transportation and refreshments a portion of each day. Some members will assist in the center's concession at the Missouri State Fair.

Mrs. Margaret Gardner, chairman of the newly established "On To Fund" suggested a White Elephant Sale be held. Mrs. Walt Schroeder will be auctioneer. The date will be announced later.

Mrs. Eddie Wise reported present efforts of Jaycee Wives to further full time directorship for the Civil Defense unit in Sedalia will be "softened" since the City Council and the Pettis County court judges have decided that Sedalia needed only a part time director. She also stated that perhaps at a later date the issue would again be taken up.

Mrs. Tom Carney resigned as constitution and by-laws chairman. Another chairman will be chosen soon. Mrs. Robert Fredricks accepted public relations chairmanship.

Mrs. Carl Zimmerschied accepted chairmanship of the July 27 Sidewalk Bazaar concession.

Mrs. Stan Gunter, president, reported on her recent trip to the national Jaycee convention in Dallas, Tex.

Miss Rita Napier, a native Sedalian, who recently returned from Hoonah, Alaska, where she taught in a high school for Indians, gave a slide illustrated talk about her experiences there.

State Jaycee board meeting will be held Aug. 7, 8 and 9 at Sikeston.

Indonesia Young: Needs Time

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—Where is Indonesia going? The question is of concern to Washington and Moscow, London and Peking.

If you ask an Indonesian—the reply is apt to be something like this:

"We are a young country—give us time."

Vastly rich in resources and with 103 million people scattered over 3,000 islands, Indonesia long has been regarded as a pivot to the future in this part of the world.

With the end of World War II, Indonesia began a struggle against centuries of Dutch rule and won its independence in 1949.

Today widespread poverty is common in the midst of natural richse.

"You must remember says an American resident, "that for years upon years the wealth of this country was drained off to serve 400 families in Holland. They have made accomplishments here in little more than 14 years. It will take time, but Indonesia must be given time."

Others disagree. They say there must be drastic changes, that patience and more time will continue a slide toward complete economic ruin.

Despite government restrictions and bureaucratic shackles, foreign firms are drawn to the wealth of Indonesia — oil, rubber, tin and minerals.

The Dutch are coming back. The British, most recent targets because of the anti-Malaysia campaign, are trying to hang on. Americans are here, along with Germans—East and West, Communist Chinese, Australians, Indians and Japanese.

Near the luxurious Hotel Indonesia, the Japanese, West Germans and Australians are building new embassies, indicating they intend to be around for a while. The sites are only a few blocks from the shell of the British Embassy, burned by rioters last September in an anti-Malaysia frenzy.

In the city of Jakarta, a few television antennas sprout from the sharply sloping red tile roofs. There is one channel, a government station that broadcasts two or three hours at night.

Most Indonesians tell you that where their country is going is nobody's business but Indonesia's. Displaying a fervent brand of nationalism, they emphasize that it definitely is not the concern of Western powers.

The United States, Britain and most of the countries of the West are, in Indonesian terms, old established forces in conflict with the new emerging forces. The new emerging forces, in Indonesian terms, include the Soviet Union, Communist China, countries of the African-Asian bloc, the Middle East and Latin America. Indonesia pictures itself as a leader among these countries.

President Sukarno, who has almost unrestricted powers, has launched Indonesia on the path of so-called guided democracy.

He has so far successfully maintained a precarious power balance between the military and the communists, the country's two centers of organized strength. Backing first one, then the other, Sukarno has made himself leader in fact as well as title.

So far, Sukarno has been able to extend his internal balancing act to Indonesia's role in the East-West cold war. He has been courted by both sides, taken aid from both, and threatened to swing about dramatically if pushed too hard.

Whether Indonesia approves or not, its future course is of concern in the seats of world power. Recent developments in other parts of Southeast Asia—and in Washington and Peking—overshadow the whole area.

Indonesia may find itself caught up in events that could upset the balance of even the most agile.

Camp Branch Women Discuss Pesticide Uses

Safe use of pesticides was discussed by Camp Branch Homemakers Club July 1 at the home of Mrs. Leroy Ryan after the topic had been presented by Mrs. Bert Stevens.

Mrs. Buel Hoard gave the family life lesson, "Developing Responsibility of Children."

Shirley Ryan gave a 4-H demonstration, "Making Belt Loops." Mrs. Leroy Ryan reported on a council meeting she attended. Mrs. Kathryn Zimmerman's newsletter was read by Mrs. Albert Tucker.

Devotional, the life story of Bud Collier, TV personality, was given by Mrs. Albert Tucker.

Members are to take cake and their own service to Green Ridge Park July 24 for an ice cream supper.

Secret pal gifts were received by Mrs. Tucker, Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Wes Harding. Mrs. Ryan was presented a hostess gift. Game award was won by Mrs. Leon Morgan.

A picnic will be held Aug. 5 at Liberty Park. Mrs. Stevens will be hostess.

Mother No Problem To Interview

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A Hollywood reporter, if sound of mind, never will interview a teen-age actress — especially if the mother comes along.

But I made an exception in the case of Tippy Walker who, along with another teen-ager, stole "The World of Henry Orient" from Peter Sellers.

Tippy, if you've seen the movie, is the mink-coated bobby soxer who gives one of the year's funniest performances against one of Sellers' better efforts.

Tippy, from Rye, N.Y., had never acted before. In fact when she tried out for her class play at Dobbs Ferry School she didn't make it.

All of this was learned at luncheon at the Beverly Hills Hotel where Tippy ate everything on the menu but the fine print.

During the interview, Nancy Walker never once kicked her daughter under the table; never once interrupted her when a pointed question was asked; never once admonished her for eating a meal that would have done justice to a Kansas wheat thresher and, in general, couldn't have cared less whether her daughter ever got another part in a movie.

Mrs. Walker explained: "We're just us. We're not theatrical. If Tippy wants to continue acting, she can but only on one condition — she will work only in the summer. She will finish her education."

Every agency in town is after Tippy — and every producer too.

But, as Mrs. Walker explained it: "Tippy likes living in New York. We just came out here as a favor to Jerry Hellman (the producer). She's more interested in visiting Disneyland and the beach than talking movie business."

Tippy, whose right name is Elizabeth Tipton Walker, is the daughter of an engineering executive.

She surprised her parents by telling them she had landed a vacation job as teen-age model for photographer Howard Zieff.

For three weeks, she modeled clothes and then Zieff arranged for her to meet producer Hellman who was looking for two natural but precocious teen-agers who invade the world of Henry Orient, a woman-chasing concert pianist.

Like Town's Name

LOOSE, England (AP)—The women of Loose have declined a change of name.

The subject came up at a meeting Thursday of the Loose Women's Institute, Mary Holding presiding.

"It appears that there are suggestions that the village should change to a less peculiar name," Mrs. Holding said.

Loose is in Kent and its name is supposed to derive from several streams which lose themselves underground.

The women's institute voted 57-3 to keep Loose.

Tired But Happy On 108th Birthday

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — Miss Dolly Johnson says she feels "tired, but still very happy" after celebrating her 108th birthday.

A resident of the Lemington Home for the Aged in suburban East Liberty the past 31 years, Miss Johnson was honored with a birthday dinner Friday.

Miss Johnson is in "fine health for a woman that age," say nurses at the home, and still "quite creative with a needle and thread," they report.

Cubans Jam Miami; Talk Up Invasion

By BEN MEYER

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The Bay of Pigs invasion is well into its fourth year of history, and still 100,000 homesick Cubans jam the Miami area — hoping, plotting to overthrow Fidel Castro.

The money pours in for this endeavor from many sources around the world.

For the Bay of Pigs operation the major source of funds as well as the management, equipment and training of the invader forces has been charged to the U.S. government's Central Intelligence Agency.

Reports are widespread that CIA again is contributing money and technical advice, but on a much more modest scale than for the Bay of Pigs. A popularly used figure on the cost of that operation was $40 million.

U.S. officials deny reports of current help.

A study of some of the many refugee groups tells the story of the heartaches of about 250,000 Cuban exiles in the United States; of the enormous task the "action" groups face in ousting a firmly entrenched Communist police state system, and of the weaknesses of their own organizations.

The amount of money they get, the number of members, their potential to harass the Castro regime are secrets or guesswork and, at times, exaggeration.

There has been criticism that some of the groups are fighting a publicity war against Castro while jockeying for leadership of the refugees.

But the money keeps rolling in — from sales of pencils, pens, pamphlets, books, "liberation bonds," "rifle bonds" ($92 buys a rifle), tithing, and gifts from Cubans rich and poor, all over the world. It must run into millions yearly.

Money is raised at ice cream socials, luncheons, lectures, art exhibits, and benefit performances by Cuban artists. There is a heavy flow, too, from private citizens in the United States and Latin America, from labor and political groups and from a few Latin American governments.

What can the exile groups do to overturn the regime in Cuba?

Leaders of three major groups concede the outlook is discouraging but insist that some day a spark might set aflame the pent-up anger of the people and liberate Cuba.

Manuel Artime of the Revolutionary Recovery Movement, Manuel Ray of the Revolutionary Junta, and Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo, head of three combined action groups, admit the job will not be easy.

So far, the exiles agree on two things:

1. They want Cuba freed of communism.

2. The task, despite many signs of growing disenchantment among the Cuban people and the Castro military forces, presents enormous problems.

In addition to the three major action groups, five or six dozen other organizations have announced they will do what they can to help free Cuba. Some plan small raids of their own; others engage in propaganda activities, psychological warfare through pamphlets, letters and radio broadcasts (Miami has three commercial Spanish language radio stations); some keep tabs on economic, fiscal, educational, military, health, prison and other problems of the Castro regime.

All expect that sooner or later they will get massive support from Cubans within Cuba, from the United States, or from Latin-American nations — or a combination of all three.

dalia to the Coffee Pot, 112 South Osage where visitors, friends and supporters will be guests at a coffee and refreshments from 3 o'clock until 4:30 in the Pine Room. Coffee and refreshments are being furnished by the Hearnes-for-Governor Committee.

Secretary Hearnes will be accompanied on his visits in Sedalia and Pettis County by W. C. Askew, of Route 1, Hughesville, chairman of the Hearnes campaign in Pettis County. Due to the tight schedule, it will be impossible to visit other communities in the county but the friends in those communities are invited to visit with the candidate at either the LaMonte Coffee or the Sedalia Coffee.

The Coffee hours are for all Democrats, men and women, and a good turn out at both places is anticipated, Askew says.

There are about 80 different kinds of the common brown bat scattered throughout the world.

the Canal Zone, the Plaza has been the center of demonstrations.

Last January it was the scene of some of the heaviest fighting which followed a Panamanian student march into the zone, protesting violation of an agreement for both country's flags to fly side-by-side.

A student group Friday called Saturday, Panama City authorities banned the meeting on the banned the meeting on the ground it was not inside the city as required and that mandatory 24-hour notice had not been given.

Armed Guardsmen were waiting when about 30 demonstrators arrived at the plaza. When officers ordered them to move on, the group now grown to about 100 persons, congregated at a railroad station one block away.

Britton, speaking at the base of a column, called for a march on the plaza. When he jumped down to lead the march, Guardsmen intercepted him.

Fists flew and some rocks were thrown during a 10-minute scuffle which followed. The demonstrators dispersed when Guardsmen threw tear gas grenades and fired some shots into the air.

41st Month Of Climb By The Economy

By ROGER LANE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's economy entered the 41st month of a steady climb in a week marked by the onset of wage negotiations in the bellwether automobile industry.

Readings on most economic barometers remained favorable, and the stock market soared to new heights.

Bargaining talks between the Big Three automakers and the United Auto Workers got under way, as usual, well in advance of existing contract expiration dates Aug. 31.

Underscoring siginficance of the negotiations, the industry reported car output records for June, the second quarter and the first half of the year.

The June showing eclipsed a standard that stood for 14 years.

Although there was no particularly fiery talk hinting trouble ahead, the mere possibility of a strike and its effect on the economy could not be ignored.

The Iron Age, a national metalworking weekly, said many major auto works stoppage would sour hopes of the steel industry for a record year. Automakers are steel's second-best customer. Such an interruption also would quickly affect other supporting industries such as rubber, glass, plastics and paint.

Both UAW President Walter P. Reuther and auto industry spokesmen vowed to settle any differences by themselves.

Directly involved were wages of 575,000 UAW auto company employes. But roughly one million other union men in supplier and other auto - related firms were likely to be affected indirectly—and the whole economy, if the settlement proves inflationary.

One mildly disturbing development during the week was a Labor Department report that the nation's jobless rate, nudged higher by the June tide of students leaving school, climbed to 5.3 per cent.

Although total employment hit 71.9 million, an all - time high, the increase of 850,000 was about 400,000 less than expected. The unemployment increase was about 100,000 beyond expectations.

The steel industry throttled down operations for a fifth week in a row, responding to seasonal influences. But the braking was so gentle and the rate of new ordering so strong that the steelmaking pace seemed likely to rebound unusually early from its low point.

Accordingly, buoyant steel stocks helped power the popular averages on the New York Stock Exchange to all-time highs in the holiday-shortened week.

The market was influenced by another glowing report of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., a company with 2.4 million shareholders. It once again reported record high quarterly earnings.

General Mills, Inc., with a fiscal year ended May 31, topped its 1959 peak in earnings, and lustrous profit reports came from other quarters.

The Commerce Department said total wholesale sales in May rose 3 per cent from the preceding month, 9 per cent from a year earlier, to a record $13.6 billion.

Fires In City

Sedalia firemen responded to what turned out to be a false alarm Friday at 3:08 p.m. The call was to 211 East Johnson.

Police Reports

Leon R. Wells, Sedalia brought a pair of sunglasses to the police station Friday. He related that he had found the glasses near the intersection of 16th and Grand.

A representative of the Webb Trim Shop, Second and Massachusetts, reported to police Friday that a car struck their garage door, damaging two of the panels of the door. The incident took place sometime Thursday evening.

Ralph Hamlin, 1010 Crescent Drive, reported the loss of Missouri Dealers' license number D-283-P to police Friday.

Accidents

No injuries resulted in a two-car accident two-tenths of a mile east of LaMonte at 3:50 p. m. Friday.

Involved were a 1963 Mercury, driven west by Ruby Crawford, 64, LaMonte, and a 1955 Chevrolet station wagon, driven west by Bernard Leroy Clark, 44, Lamonte.

According to Trooper Pete Stohr who investigated, the Crawford vehicle slowed to make a right turn off the highway and the station wagon was in collision with the rear of the Mercury.

A chartered Continental Trailways bus carrying 43 American Field Service students representing approximately 40 foreign countries was in collision with a 1959 Buick at the first turnoff for Smithton on Highway 50 at 4:50 p.m. Friday.

The driver of the bus, Charles Leon Doss, 27, Olathe, Kan., and his passengers were uninjured. James Case, Jr., 36, Independence, the driver of the Buick was brought to Bothwell Hospital in the Ewing ambulance, where he was treated by Dr. Carl Siegel and X-rayed for possible chest injuries. He was admitted to the hospital.

According to the accident report of Trooper Pete Stohr, both vehicles were headed east on Route 50 when the Case car slowed to make a right turn. The bus was in collision with the rear of the Buick and the impact forced the Buick across the parkway dividing the south bound road and back before stopping.

The students on the bus had completed a stay in homes in California and were headed for the East coast. It was reported that the bus trip had originated in Dixon, Calif.

Damage was not estimated to the car, but $550 damage was recorded to the bus.

The 2800 block of West Broadway was the scene of a two-car accident at 3:10 p. m. Friday.

Involved were a 1962 Ford, driven west on Broadway by Francis H. McKillip, 44, Cuba, Mo., and a 1962 Pontiac, driven east on Broadway and negotiating a left turn by Milton L. Harris, 50, Blue Springs, Mo.

Damaged were the left front fender, bumper, and grille of the McKillip car and the hood of the Harris car.

Police investigated a four-car accident at the intersection of Second and Lamine at 5:07 p.m. Friday.

Involved were a 1962 Chevrolet, driven south on Lamine by Ella Dean Inhauser, 35, Houstonia; a 1957 Chevrolet, driven north on Lamine and negotiating a left turn by Donald D. Trout, 28, 321 East Harvey; a 1959 Rambler, parked on Second and owned by Charles S. Newman, 168 South Autumn; and a 1956 Mercury, parked on Second and owned by Emma Cooper, Route 2, Lincoln.

According to the police accident report, the accident occurred as the Trout car struck the Inhauser car, turned right and struck the Cooper car and scraped the Newman car.

Damaged were the left front fender, bumper, and grille of the Inhauser car; the front end of the Trout car; the left front fender of the Newman car; and the left rear end of the Cooper car.

Trout was given a police summons for driving while intoxicated by city police and is to appear in police court, July 6. He was in city jail at press-time Friday night in lieu of bond.

out discrimination or segregation on the ground of race, color, religion, or national origin."

Q. When did this become effective?

A. Thursday night, when President Johnson signed the measure into law.

Q. Are there any criminal penalties for violating it?

A. No. Enforcement is through injunction suits brought in federal courts by individuals or, if a pattern or practice of discrimination is alleged, by the U.S. attorney general.

Q. What if a court order barring discrimination is not obeyed?

A. A judge, using his civil contempt powers, could put a person in jail until he agreed to obey the court order. But if a judge wanted to punish a person for a past violation through criminal contempt proceedings, there would have to be a jury trial.

Q. What about the ban on discrimination in employment? When does it become effective?

A. A year from now.

Q. What businesses will it apply to?

A. Businesses with 100 or more employes are covered in the first year after it becomes effective, those with 75 or more in the second, those with 50 or more in the third, and those with 25 or more thereafter.

Q. What about seasonal employes? How are they counted?

A. Employes are counted for coverage purposes only if they worked at least 20 weeks for the business in a year.

Q. Does this part of the bill prohibit discrimination on account of sex?

A. Yes, and on account of race, color, religion or national origin.

Q. What about enforcement?

A. No criminal penalties are provided for violations. As in the public accommodations section, suits may be brought by aggrieved individuals or by the attorney general.

In both of these two parts of the bill, provision is made to seek voluntary settlements of complaints and to give states with their own laws in these fields a chance to act before the federal government steps in.

Integrated Facilities In Johnson City

STONEWALL, Tex. (AP) — Tourists visiting the summer White House will have a choice of integrated motel and dining facilities in this small community two miles from the LBJ Ranch as well as in President Johnson's boyhood home town 15 miles east, Johnson City.

Kermit Hahne, operator of the new Stonewall Motel, said his nearby restaurant had been integrated the eight years since it opened.

His 10-unit motel is the only overnight facility in Stonewall.

In Johnson City motel owner Emil Kroll said passage of the new civil rights law will not affect his business.

"We try to accommodate everybody," Kroll said.

the Peterson home and heard a shot. She said the boy then told her he had shot Peterson. He then left the house. The girl was not harmed.

Eight patrol cars, sheriffs and deputies from several counties and police from nearby communities joined the hunt near the Missouri-Iowa border for the boy.

The mother of the dead youth is Mrs. Chloris Peterson. His father died two years ago. Mrs. Peterson is an aunt of the 13-year-old boy, the sheriff's office said.

Sheriff's officers later said the 13-year-old boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Longnecker of Sioux City. He was making a customary summer visit to the Petersons.

The Pearce girl daughter of Dr. and Mrs. D. I. Pearce of Princeton, said she had been going with the dead youth, who was a student at Northeast Missouri State College, Maryville.

She said no argument preceded the shooting and that the boy had been hunting blackbirds, with the rifle.

Mrs. Peterson was in Unionville at the time of the shooting.

Peterson also is survived by two brothers, Steve, 22, and Pat 18. They were away from home.

Fireworks Missing In Cards Start

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The St. Louis Cardinals and the Kansas City Athletics went into the Fourth of July weekend without any fireworks Friday night.

And Wally Bunker of Baltimore and John Tsitouris of Cincinnati were not giving any away.

Bunker, the sensational 19-year-old rookie, doused water on any Kansas City attack with a one-hitter and a 4-0 victory in Baltimore.

Tsitouris ended a modest two-game Cardinals' winning streak by putting out the fire in St. Louis bats for a 4-1 triumph at Cincinnati on a seven-hitter.

Only Rocky Colavito's double in the fifth gave Bunker anything to worry about. He retired the first 12 A's, then hung up another string of outs after Colavito connected. He walked Wayne Causey in the ninth.

The victory was Bunker's eighth in 10 decisions.

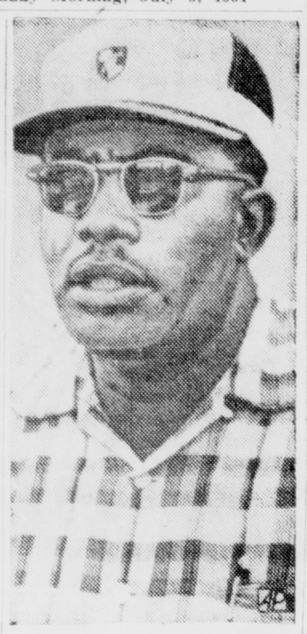
Brooks Robinson and Bob Johnson homered for all the runs Bunker needed. Orlando Pena allowed two runs in five innings for the defeat.

Bob Gibson gave himself a 1-0 lead in the second inning with a run-scoring single after a 90-minute rain delay, but that's all he got off Tsitouris.

Vada Pinson supplied the Reds' fireworks with a two-run triple in the fifth and a run-scoring single in the seventh. Bob Skinner fumbled the hit and another run scored on the play.

The loss evened Gibson's record at 6-6 and Tsitouris' at 5-5.

Mike Cuellar (0-1) will make his second start tonight for the Cardinals against Jim O'Toole (7-4).



U.S. COACH—Ed Temple of Tennessee State University is the mentor of the American women's track team for the Olympic Games in October. He coached the team in 1960.

Rodriguez Told to Stop His Clowning

Rodriguez, whose 36 hole total of 134 led the $125,000 Whitemarsh Open Golf Tournament by one stroke today has been told in no uncertain terms by some fellow pros to stop clowning.

The 29-year-old Puerto Rican tried to act subdued Friday as he toured the 6,807-yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club golf course in four-under-par 68. With his first round 66, he led Dave Marr, the Texan playing out of New Rochelle, N.Y. Marr had rounds of 67-68—135.

"Some of the pros are getting too hot at me," said Rodriguez after completing his second round. "They don't wish me to kid."

However, the slim built pro takes golf as serious as the next pro and said the bantering on the course merely relaxes him and enables him to play better.

He tried to contain himself Friday after one of his partners complained about Rodriguez' display of levity during the second round. But it didn't work. At one point, overjoyed about a shot, he leaped over a rope and shook hands with a little girl.

Rodriguez intimated the pros will just have to put up with him as the new clown prince of golf.

The pros shattered par again Friday at Whitemarsh as 45 shot under the 36-36—72 regulation figures. Eighteen equalled the 72.

Ralph Boston Excites Crowd In High Jump

NEW YORK (AP)—"I send my regards to the Ter," said broad jumper Ralph Boston.

"Tell Valery I'll see him soon," added an exhuberant John Thomas.

Thus the gauntlet was thrown to the Soviet Union's track and field stars by two happy winners in the U.S. Olympic Trials Friday at Randall's Island.

Boston, who will defend his championship next October in Tokyo, excited a crowd of 13,000 with a leap of 27 feet, 4 inches and then 27-5½, both eclipsing the world record of 27 3¼ held by Russia's Igor Ter-Ovaesyan.

Both were disallowed for recognition because the wind was blowing harder than the 4.47 miles per hour officially allowed.

The wind was 5.8 m.p.h. on the first of Ralph's jumps and 15.2 on the second.

Thomas, the rangy Bostonian who was the goat of the 1960 Olympics in Rome, assured himself of another shot at Russia's great Valery Brumel by winning the high jump with an effortless leap of 7-1.

As winner of the high jump final, he becomes an automatic nominee for the Olympic team, as do all other finals winners here. The next five best qualifiers get a shot at the other two places in the final trials at Los Angeles Sept. 12-13.

Jay Luck, a Yale graduate running for the New Haven Track Club, pulled the biggest surprise of the opening day by winning the 400-mettr hurdles in 49.4 seconds, just 2-10ths of a second off the world record. He beat such stars as Bill Hardin, Rex Cawley and Chris Stauffer.

Others to clinch team berths were Trenton Jackson of Illinois in the 100 meters, 10.1; Hal Connolly, in the hammer throw, 225-4; Jim Stevenson, in the javelin, 242-8; Dallas Long, in the shot put, 64-9½, and Bob Schul, in the 5,000-meter race, 14:10.8.

The 5,000-meters proved the high point of the program with a skinny 18-year-old kid from Spokane, Wash., Jerry Lindgren, setting the pace most of the way. Bob Schul of Dayton, Ohio, put on one of his blistering spurts on the final leg to beat out Bill Dellinger of Portland, Ore., with Lindren falling back to third.

Action-Crammed Bout Between Light Heavies

NEW YORK (AP)—"You've got to manhandle this guy to beat him," Wayne Thornton's handlers screamed at him in his corner between rounds.

The 24-year-old fighter from Fresno, Calif. followed instructions, gained a split 10-round decision over Eddie Cotton of Seattle Friday night and an apparent shot at light heavyweight champion Willie Pastrano.

Teddy Brenner, matchmaker for Madison Square Garden where Thornton won the nationally televised scrap, said he hoped to make the Thornton-Pastrano title match for New Orleans sometime in October.

Thornton is a native of Oak Grove, La. and Pastrano is from New Orleans.

It was an action - crammed bout with Thornton flooring the veteran 38-year-old Cotton for an automatic eight count in the third round and Thornton being saved by the bell ending the eighth round as he reeled across the ring and into the ropes.

At the end Judge Frank Forbes and Referee Zack Clayton voted for Thornton, 5-4-1 and 5-3-2, respectively. The other judge, Bill Recht, had Cotton on top 5-3-2 as did The Associated Press 6-3-1.

Thornton weighed 175, Cotton 172.

Wally Bunker Hurls Second One Hitter

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rookie pitcher Wally Bunker of the Baltimore Orioles didn't feel weel before the game. The Kansas City Athletics felt worse afterward.

The 19-year-old bonus right-hander reported to Memorial Stadium with a headache, took a couple of aspirins, and then went out and hurled his second one-hitter of the season.

Brooks Robinson and Bob Johnson whacked homers as the Orioles won 4-0 and increased their American League lead to four games over the New York Yankets. Bunker's first shutout upped his record to 8-2 with a 3.23 earned run average.

Bunker retired the first 12 Kansas City batters before Rocky Colavito doubled to the base of the fence in left center as the leadoff batter in the fifth. Colavito moved to third on an infield out, but was stranded when Bunker struck out Bill Bryan and retired Ed Charles on a pop fly.

The only other Kansas City runner was Wayne Causey, who walked on a 3-1 pitch with two out in the ninth. Bunker threw 20 pitches in the ninth, but only 94 for the game.

"I threw one wrong pitch," Bunker said, a familiar post-game comment by a pitcher who has just hurled a one-hitter. But, he wasn't referring to the double by Colavito.

"I threw one pitch where I didn't want to," Bunker said. "It was in the fifth inning, and the batter hit a foul ball."

Bunker honestly didn't remember who the batter was. He hasn't been around long enough to know who he's getting out.

The rookie said he threw four curves and three change - up pitches. All the rest were fast balls.

"I had perfect control," Bunker said. "With control like that, nobody can beat me. I broke about six bats. That means you're throwing the ball where you want it."

Referee Mixup For Patterson, Machen Contest

STOCKHOLM (AP)—Will the referee for Sunday night's Floyd Patterson - Eddie Machen fight please stand up?

Amid preparations Friday for the 12-round heavyweight clash, a mixup emerged over whether Teddy Waltham, secretary of the British Boxing Board of Control, or Fernando Pica of Italy one of six referees approved by the European Boxing Union for major fights, would handle the bout.

Stockholm afternoon papers reported that Waltham had been approved by Swedish promoter Edwin Ahlquist after both the Patterson and Machen camps had turned down Ahlquist's original recommendation of Andrew Smythe.

Smythe was referee at the 1958 fight in Goteborg, in which Ingemar ohansson floored Machen in the first round and qualified for a shot at Patterson's title.

Later local press reports said Ahlquist got the impression that Waltham was unable to attend the bout and asked the EBU to name the referee.

Waltham, however, said "I'll arrive in Stockholm Saturday morning." Pica also is expected from Rome.

Meanwhile, the fight was shaping up as a virtual non - betting affair. No odds were being quoted on the fight, which observers saw as an even match.

The fight, being staged at 55,000-seat open-air Raasunda Stadium, will start at 11:30 a.m. EST Sunday.

Birdie Tebbets Shows Up At Chicago Game

CHICAGO (AP)—Birdie Tebbetts, manager of the Cleveland Indians who was stricken with a heart attack in spring training, made his first appearance of the season Friday night in the opener of a four-game series against the Chicago White Sox.

The 52-year-old manager donned a uniform, posed for pictures and then retired to his hotel room.

Tebbetts made out the line-up which turned in a 2-1 victory over the White Sox in 11 innings.

"I'll work in gradually," said Tebbetts who doesn't figure to take complete control of the club for at least two more weeks.

While Tebbetts has been recuperating at his home in Anna Marie, Fla., Coach George Strickland has been running the club. This was the case when Tebbetts retired Friday.

Sports Scraps

(By D. KELLY SCRUTON)

THE new Southwest Sedalia Lions Club has taken on two big projects. One is sponsoring the Arabian Horse Show, scheduled for the weekend of July 18 and 19 at the Missouri State Fairgrounds. This show is one which lovers of horses will enjoy and they will see some real presentations by the horses and their owners and handlers.

The second project is bringing back to Sedalia the National Championship Work-off of the Appaloosa horses. This show will attract several hundred horses, their owners and handlers, not to mention the following of horse-show fans. This show is scheduled to be held for four days, Oct. 7-10.

Arrangements are now in the making with State Fair officials to hold the event at the Missouri State Fairgrounds.

This October show is terrific in that it presents numerous events for Appaloosa horses. There will be two afternoons of racing, five events to be run each afternoon on Friday and Saturday on the track in front of the grandstand.

The semi-final work - off will be on Friday night with the finals to be held on Saturday night.

Throughout the week the national Queen of the Appaloosa Horse Association will be on hand to greet the visitors, present various awards and such.

Ray Young, field representative of the association informed Harry Goldberg, president of the club, the show had been awarded to Sedalia. The local selection was due to the excellent accommodations afforded for the horses at the fairgrounds, the large Coliseum in which the show and workoff is to be held and the most excellent race track; also the accommodations for the owners and handlers of the horses during their stay in Sedalia.

Every effort is to be put forth by the Lions Club to see the championship affair is a big success.

For a new civic club, the Southwest Lions are certainly putting their best foot forward in bringing to Sedalia activities which are also an economic benefit for the city.

—o—

IT was gratifying to learn Thursday the Sedalia Country Club golf team had finally brought together golfers who wanted to win—they have jumped from the cellar to second spot in the Inter-City annual golf tournament, the highest they have been in the standings in several years.

Backing of club fans was proven by a telegram to the team of many and varied promises of what they would receive for "life" if they won the championship of the circuit. But congratulations would be afforded should they place second.

After the telegram was received, it was reported a certain dealer in milk and ice cream suddenly realized the message said "for life" and he immediately started to do a little worrying. It was reported the "Baron" said, "I don't believe we could afford that. Others on the telegram assured him the locals wouldn't or couldn't collect enough points to overcome the lead of Columbia—but maybe the inspiration might get them second spot anyway. That it did.

Incidentally four members of the golf team went to Kansas City a week ago and participated in the Missouri State Amatuer tournament. A telegram they received from local "admirers" apparently shook 'em up to the point where they couldn't even make par.

Better luck next time to your foursome.

Boat Race Showing By Americans

HENLEY, England —AP — Seymour Cromwell of New York won the classic Diamond Sculls and two American eight-oared crews captured trophies in the Henley Royal Regatta.

Cromwell decisively defeated Argentina's Alberto Demiddi in the sculls. Rowing the mile and 550 yards on the River Thames in 8:06, he won by a whopping 2 ¾ lengths.

The Eliot House crew from Harvard won the Thames Cup, beating the London Rowing Club by two lengths with a time of 6:tt. Washington-Lee High School of Arlington County, Va., beat Groton School of Massachusetts in an all-American final for the Princess Elizabeth Cup, the regatta's top schoolboy event. The Virginians won by two thirds of a length in 6:52.

These victories, plus a North American triumph by John Roche Kiely of Jacksonville, Fla., and John Lecky of Canada in the Silver Goblets for paired oars, ended a long chain of American defeats at Henley. They marked the first time since 1960 Americans had won titles.

A crew of big Lithuanians representing the Soviet Union took Henley's biggest title, winning the Grand Challtnge Cup for eights from the University of London by three lengths. Their time of 6:25 was two seconds slower than the record they set Friday.

One American entry was [illegible] en in a final. Phillips Exeter Academy trailed Britain's Molesley Boat Club by 2 1-3 lengths in the Prince Philip Cup for fours with coxswain.

64 Women Golf At Whiteman Invitational

Members of Whiteman Officers Wives Club Golf Association were hostesses at an invitational golf tourney at the base Tuesday with 64 women from Sedalia, Warrensburg, Clinton, Windsor, Elm Hills and Whiteman participating.

Jan Smith, president of the host association, welcomed the group at luncheon at the Officers Open Mess after the morning's play. She introduced her chairmen Juanita Hawkins Dottie Green, Billie Watkins, Margaret Graves, Eileen Marsh and the Officers Wives Club president, Mimi Marsh.

Awards went to Estelle Gumm, Whiteman, low medalist 43; Alice Kellner, Warrensburg, low medalist, 46; Beatrice Wetzel, Clinton, low, 47; Dolores Gerlacz, Elm Hills, 52; Betty Dugan, Sedalia Country Club, 47; Hope Browning, Warrensburg, 52; Jan Smith, Whiteman, 44; Helen Wilson, Windsor, 50.

Boat Racing Will Be An Attraction

Boat racing will be a Sunday, July 12, attraction on Lake Pomme de Terre south of Hermitage, sponsored by the Hermitage Lions Club. The program is a free sporting event.

The scheduled course for the races is in the Hermitage Public Use Area on the Lindley arm of the lake off of Route K.

Lyman Owens, Springfield, Commodore of the Prop Riders Racing Club, is making the arrangements for the program and announced many speedsters of the water sport will be there from adjoining states as well as a goodly number from Missouri and the area.

It is the third annual event of its kind sponsored by the Lions. The Corps of Engineers estimated 3,200 people witnessed the 1963 races.

The program is made possible through the cooperation of business men from Hermitage, as well as from the lake area.

A fall program is also being planned.

The name "bourgeoisie" comes from the word "burgensis." In modern usage, the bourgeoisie are the middle class of society, but in the late Middle Ages, they were burgensis, or inhabitants of a walled town.

WANTED!
MEN --- WOMEN

from ages 18 to 52. Prepare now for U.S. Civil Service job openings in this area during the next 12 months.
Government positions pay as high as $446.00 a month to start. They provide much greater security than private employment and excellent opportunity for advancement. Many positions require little or no specialized education or experience.
But to get one of these jobs, you must pass a test. The competition is keen and in some cases only one out of five pass. Lincoln Service has helped thousands prepare for these tests every year since 1948. It is one of the largest and oldest privately owned schools of its kind and is not connected with the Government.
For FREE information on Government jobs, including list of positions and salaries, fill out coupon and mail at once—TODAY. You will also get full details on how you can prepare yourself for these tests. Don't delay—ACT NOW!

Highest Pesidential Award

Medals of Freedom Awarded To 25 Men and Five Women

WASHINGTON (AP)—Twenty-five men and five women prominent in public affairs, business, science, education, journalism and the arts were announced Friday as 1964 winners of the Medal of Freedom, highest civil honor the President can bestow.

In announcing the recipients' names, President Johnson said:

"Collectively, they have made man's world safe, his physical body more durable, his mind broader, his leisure more delightful, his standard of living higher and his dignity important.

"They are creators; we are the beneficiaries."

Those receiving the medal range in age from 37 to 86.

Created in 1945 to reward civilian accomplishments in war, the award's scope was broadened in 1952 to include distinguished civilian contributions to the national security.

In February of 1963 the late President John F. Kennedy reorganized the program to make it an annual recognition by the White House of persons who have contributed significantly to the quality of American life.

Under the new system, Kennedy last July 4 named 31 to receive the medal but the actual award was not made until December after Johnson had succeeded the slain president.

The announcement Friday did not give a date for this year's presentation.

In alphabetical order, this year's recipients are:

Dean W. Acheson, 71, secretary of state from 1949 to 1953 and a governmental adviser since. He lives in Washington, D.C.

Fear Struggle Is Not Over

Fate of St. Augustine Hangs On Delicate Thread

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP)—Weathered old missions and crusty green cannons and venerable oaks standing in ancient courtyards give the impression that St. Augustine is centuries past the point where any force at all could shake its social stability.

But St. Augustine has gone through a full-blown civil rights struggle, and today it trembles in anxiety as it once rocked with violence.

The struggle has so torn the city that only a delicate thread —in the form of a secret biracial committee — is holding its social fabric together and the struggle, many fear, is far from over.

And as the "long hot summer" moves inevitably toward promised large and small demonstrations across the South, St. Augustine offers a study in what can happen to a city unprepared for what has come to be known as "nonviolent direct action."

Already St. Augustine has been racked economically. Chamber of Commerce manager H. B. Chitty estimates a loss of $8 to $10 million dollars in the city's annual tourist income of $22 million. Some businessmen have thrown up their hands. "Come Labor Day," said Tom Wiles, who operates a beachfront snack shop, "I'm going to close up for good and try to pay my bills." Restaurants and motels report business off as much as 54 per cent.

But economic woes are only part of St. Augustine's agony. "We've lost control of our city," said innkeeper Eddy Mussallem. "We've become a battle ground for extreme elements on both sides."

Perhaps the most damaging results of the racial conflict to St. Augustine's future are the animosities splitting the white community, born of high passion during the demonstrations and fanned by bitterly conflicting views among civic leaders on how to deal with them.

Rapport between Negroes and whites has suffered. "I'm tired of being cussed at and called nigger every place I go," complained a worker at the St. Augustine alligator farm. "Folks didn't used to behave that way."

Indeed folks didn't. Back in the twenties the town's leading beautician was a Negro woman named Carrie Macon. One of the directors of the St. Augustine National Bank, Will Martin, also was a Negro, and Negro and white baseball teams used the same dressing rooms at the city ball park.

But that was also a period in which Negro education, according to one old timer, "was sorely neglected." The Negroes' position in St. Augustine steadily deteriorated over the years.

The first incident leading up to the present crisis came two years ago when a group of students from Florida Normal, a Negro college, staged a sit-in at a dime store. As police were escorting them out, a white youth slugged one of them.

A year ago last spring a committee of Negroes headed by Dr. R. B. Hayling appeared before the City Commission with a list of demands. The commission refused to act on any of them. Then, in a move interpreted by many as a gratutious gesture of intransigence, the commission passed an ordinance prohibiting fishing from the bridge over the Matanzas River. Few if any whites ever fished there.

The tempo of Negro demonstrations picked up. White tempers grew short.

Then one hot night last fall the Ku Klux Klan held a rally in a pasture 6 miles out of town. Dr. Hayling showed up and was roundly beaten — "initiated" as one klansman put it. A short time later, a car full of white youths drove into the Negro section. The car was shot into and one youth was killed. In the nights that followed there were sporadic incidents of shooting.

Again a Negro committee approached the city commission and again there was no action.

And that was when Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and his Southern Christian Leadership Conference agreed to come to St. Augustine. Dr. King didn't miss the symbolic value of demonstrations in the nation's oldest city.

He preached to the St. Augustine Negroes in their stifling hot churches where they gathered to sing the old slave songs, mournful and sweet, and the new civil rights songs, spirited and challenging.

He told them to purify themselves, to "prepare to offer your very bodies for freedom and be ready to be clubbed and kicked without retaliating." Then he led them into the streets.

For a fortnight the city was in the grip of terror. The Negro demonstrations brought on counterdemonstrations by whites, most of them sun-burnished youths wearing denims, work shoes and soiled shirts, and carrying 39-cent Confederate flags. Some were members of the Ancient City Hunting Club, a group headed by Holsted (Hoss) Manucy, a hulking segregationist who wore a black polo shirt, boots and a cowboy hat and kept in contact with his forces through roving cars equipped with citizens-band radio.

Illinois Woman Dies In Crash Near Eldon

ELDON, Mo. (AP) — Mrs. Vernell L. Smith, 42, of Bethalto, Ill., was killed Friday in a car that overturned three times near Eldon.

Three other women from Bethalto were injured.

The car overturned after it was bumped from the rear by another car that was passing a line of traffic at the crest of a hill, the Highway Patrol said.

thing. They could sneak back in the very next day.

Also, under the present policies, the civilian economy and population of South Viet Nam is being slowly strangled to death. The whole country is being conscripted, in effect—and still there is no policy that sets a goal of victory for all of this!

The supplies of the Communist invaders have got to be shut off.

This means threatening or actually interdicting the supply routes from Red China, Laos, and Cambodia.

It does not mean bombing Vietnamese, or even bombing Vietnamese cities.

So long as the Communists are going to wage war on their neighbors, and on us, their vital supplies should not be protected as they are today. We should make this clear to the Communists. Perhaps the threat alone would work. If not, it might require only very limited actions to make our point—and make it stick.

Of course, there would be the clear understanding that any revival of aggression would bring immediate return of the tougher policies.

Q. Do you think the tax cut has helped the economy?

SCRANTON:

The economy has probably benefited, at least in the short run, from the reduction in taxes. However, the failure by the administration to accompany the tax cut with tax reform and with reduction of government expenditures has both enhanced the privileged position of some special interests in the economy and has increased the long-run danger of inflation.

We must be prepared to use the federal budget as a fiscal tool, as was done in the Eisenhower administration—not as a campaign document. Unless we face the hard facts of fiscal responsibility, further tax cuts will be impossible and the momentary stimulation resulting from the recent cut will be wiped out in an inflationary spiral. Further, an important means to economic stimulation in times of recession will be lost.

GOLDWATER:

The rise in the cost of living, inflation and increased government spending has wiped out the effect of the tax cut for most Americans.

Although I agree wholeheartedly with the wish to cut taxes, and am committed to policies which would make it possible, I opposed the current move because it could prove dangerously inflationary in the long run. There is no corresponding cut in government spending but, instead, the announced prospect of continued deficit spending.

Q. What would you do about Cuba and trade by U.S. allies with Cuba?

SCRANTON:

I have proposed a three-pronged strategy of economic, psychological, and Guerrilla warfare against the present Communist regime in Cuba. pressure to bear on our allies to cease all trade with Cuba. Such economic boycott might well make the cost of Khrushchev's Caribbean satrapy prohibitively high. Cuban freedom fighters should be allowed to carry on constant guerrilla warfare against the Communists. The subversive infiltration now emanating from Cuba throughout all Latin America cannot be permitted to continue.

A progressive American administration will drive communism once and for all from the Western Hemisphere.

GOLDWATER:

We must impose, again, an effective economic-miltary blockade of Cuba. We must enforce our restrictions and levy penalties against shipping which attempts to trade with both the United States and Cuba. We must have an equally effective blockade against the export of agitators and arms from Cuba.

A tight blockade around Cuba would heavily undermine Castro's power, put an unacceptably high price on the Soviet aid which is propping up his police-state, and enable the people of Cuba themselves—those inside the country, together with an exile army—to live under freedom once more. Immediate U.S. recognition of a Cuban government-in-exile would be the indispensable first step toward Cuban self-liberation. Such a government could ask for every form of U.S. and Organization of American States, support—and ought to receive it.

Even though the Soviet IRBMS (intermediate range ballistic missiles) were allegedly removed from Cuba in 1962, surface-to-air missiles are still there—reportedly, soon to be turned over to Cuban control. A new missile crisis may well be brewing.

Only strong action can forestall the storms which are now building in the Caribbean. Many Latin-American nations have expressed a willingness to support action against Castro before it is too late. But there has been no leadership from the present administration. The United States must now provide that leadership, and erect a firm barrier against communism in this hemisphere.

Q. Do you believe civil rights legislation will diminish street demonstrations? Do you believe there will be a "backlash" by Northern whites if such demonstrations occur?

SCRANTON:

The new civil rights bill, while an essential step forward, will not end demonstrations by Negroes unless further progress is swiftly made along the whole frontier of civil rights.

The new federal civil rights bill will have almost no direct effect in many Northern and Western states which have already adopted most of the provisions in this bill. It will have little or no effect on the de facto segregation which is still widely practiced in the North.

Progress, and immediate progress, at that, is essential in solving the very real problems of housing, education, and employment. Ultimately, of course, this is a matter of the human heart. We must change men's hearts, if we are to end the evil of discrimination throughout the United States. I believe that we are in the process of doing so.

GOLDWATER:

This is fundamentally a matter of the heart. The problems of discrimination can never be cured by laws alone; but I would be the first to agree that laws can help—laws carefully considered and weighed in an atmosphere of dispassion, in the absence of political demagoguery, and in the light of fundamental constitutional principles. We now have too much government and too little understanding in these matters; too much mob and too little individual responsibility.

The climate of violence and disorder is a storm that is brewed in a governmental philosophy which too long has ignored individual responsibilities and individual capacity. I charge that those who take either side of this cause into the streets in violation of the law dishonor their cause, default their leadership, and defame this nation.

Q. Where specifically do you propose reducing current federal spending?

SCRANTON:

Federal expenditures can be kept in line through strict controls and improved housekeeping of the kind that my administration has installed in Pennsylvania. Solution of the present chaos in our agricultural policies should permit substantial reduction of the astronomical cost of the present administration's farm program. Also, it is possible that a forward-looking foreign policy may enable us to make some reduction in military expenditures over the next few years.

There must be determination and fortitude in cutting out waste, and unnecessary programs. The cost of operating the federal government is closely related to general conditions within our economy. A strong economy, with inflationary factors held in check, will permit us to operate the government on an efficient basis.

GOLDWATER:

A detailed review of the budget, with the many items of saving that could be effected, is far beyond the scope of this question, obviously. I would examine every proposal for federal spending to make absolutely sure:

1. That we really need it and that it isn't just a political plum.
2. That we can afford it.
3. That there is no other program more urgently needed.
4. That there is built into the program a firm demand that it regularly be reviewed so that when it has done its job, it can be phased out.
5. That even if a need is proven there must also be proof that it can be done only at the federal level rather than at the state or local level which, to a Republican, would be preferable if possible.

Q. Do you favor health care for the elderly financed through Social Security?

SCRANTON:

Pennsylvania has the broadest, most progressive medical care for the aged program under the Kerr-Mills Act anywhere in the nation. I wish that all states would follow suit. But I am opposed to achieving needed improvements in our medical aid program through the Social Security system.

If this cost were loaded onto our Social Security system liberalization of present benefits in the system would become very difficult to finance. Also, low-income earners would be forced to pay a disproportionate share of the cost of providing health care for the aged.

At the same time I feel that the federal contribution to the cost of health care programs should be increased. This should be paid for through the federal government's regular graduated system of taxation. State participation in health care programs should be preserved, but standards should be built into the program to require all states to offer basic benefits.

A tie-in between the government insurance program and private programs should be made possible, as was proposed recently by Pennsylvania, and was prohibited through regulation by the Johnson administration.

GOLDWATER:

The Social Security system is not the way to do it effectively. One sure way to wreck the Social security system would be to saddle it with unnecessary new burdens, such as medicare. We penalize every aged citizen if we thus bankrupt the system which protects them.

Q. What is your general view of the current U.S. arms and defense position?

SCRANTON:

The United States is the strongest nation in the world and through effective arms policies will remain so. No Republican should this year repeat the performance of our Democratic opponents in 1960 in raising false doubts about the military preparedness of the United States.

The Democratic candidates in 1960 shook the confidence of our own people and of the Western Alliance by fomenting the propaganda gimmick of a "missile gap." The Democrats themselves admitted that the missile gap had never existed a few weeks after they came into office. No Republican leader will be guilty of such irresponsibility this year.

A new Republican administration will preserve a proper "mix" in weapons systems.

I have raised, and will continue to raise until all the facts are in, fundamental questions about the reliability of our intercontinental ballistic missiles. It is not a question of theoretical accuracy. The fact is that not one of our advanced ICBMs has ever been subjected to a full test—of all component systems, including warheads—under simulated battle conditions.

This does not mean that our missile systems should be scrapped or that primary emphasis should be shifted back to the manned bomber. But nothing is more dangerous than a static, rigid position.

The indictment of this administration's defense policies includes the following major charges:

1. Not a single major new strategic weapons system has been inaugurated since 1961. Because lead-time from conception to operability of any major system is measured in years, sole reliance on our present missile force is at best a high-risk gamble.

2. While freezing missile capabilities in their present state, we are phasing-out completely the manned bomber. By the decade of the '70s, the United States will be banking on a single, inflexible weapons system.

3. This administration's decision to enter into a test-ban treaty precluding all atmospheric nuclear explosions means that we cannot properly test even our present missile systems. Nor can we even test the reliability of our hardened missile sites to be sure that they will survive a first strike and still be ready for retaliatory action.

4. We know that high-yield nuclear weapons can disrupt the electronic components of our missile systems. It is conceivable that such weapons could render ineffective or inoperative a large percentage of our missiles. And so it is all the more imperative that back-up forces, including manned aircraft and nuclear-powered naval vessels, continue to be part of our arsenal.

5. We have no present programs looking toward primarily military applications for the environment of space. Soviet space technology, we have every reason to believe, is being precisely so oriented. We must face the possibility that a technological breakthrough in the space-environment might render obsolete our entire present arsenal of ICBMs. What is needed today, and urgently, is the extension of the concept of air superiority into aerospace.

6. The primacy of civilian control over the military is an indispensable principle of American democracy. But this administration has depended too heavily and too exclusively on untrained civilian officials, while tending to downgrade the advice of skilled and dedicated career members of the military professions.

If we continue to place over-reliance on missiles rather than a mixed arsenal, our only reactions to unacceptable Soviet probes would have to be submission — or all-out nuclear war. There are many types of warfare that can take place between the extremes of hot and cold. We must be ready for all of them.

The defense policies of this administration add up, in effect, to unilaterla disarmament. We are lagging behind in weapons technology and in the development of new systems. This nation must never drop its guard or enter into disarmament "traps" that are not completely safe-guarded by foolproof inspection.

The administration thesis, on the other hand, seems to be that we should cut back on weapons that may be "provocative" to the Soviets, in the hope that they will follow suit. This is wishful thinking. It represents a terrible gamble with the lives of every free man, woman, and child on earth.

The lessons of history are clear: A just peace can be secured only through strength and its prudent use—or the threat of its use. All efforts to trim tht fat from our defense budget are desirable. But our military men must be provided with the varied tools they need to do their job, to protect this nation and keep the peace.

The earth is estimated to contain 6,586 quintillion tons of matter.

Red China Reworking Its Strategy

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Communist China appears to be reworking its strategy in Asia.

Peking is cut off from insurance of Soviet military protection. It is denied economic cooperation by most of the Communist bloc. Now it seems to be getting ready for a retreat to prepared diplomatic positions.

It would be no surprise if Red China sought talks with the United States looking toward at least temporary removal of the fuse from the Asian bomb.

Straws in the wind hint that a careful, gradual Red Chinese about-face is coming, despite all the recent talk from Peking about dangers of war in the Laos and Viet Nam situations.

If victory for communism in Laos and Viet Nam had looked easy, if there had been a definite vacuum to be occupied, the Red Chinese could have been expected to act aggressively.

But it was another matter when the Chinese found their toughness countered with American toughness, when President Johnson warned that the United States was willing to risk war to protect Southeast Asia.

It is doubtful that many in Washington believed Mao Tze-tung's regime wanted to go to war with the United States over Indochinese real estate, or that Mao really wanted to provoke a military confrontation with Americans, particularly with no guarantee of automatic Soviet support.

If there is no easy victory in Laos and South Viet Nam, then perhaps Red China, faced with enormous internal problems and anxious to build the economy, might go for the sort of neutralization the French are talking about, though they likely would balk at neutralizing Communist North Viet Nam.

President Charles de Gaulle seems to have been trying to advise the United States that maintenance of the situation as it is today in Indochina is not worth going to war for — but that it would be worth going to war to maintain a neutralist solution that holds back Red expansion.

The Soviets seem to sniff something new from Peking, and Moscow sounds angrier than ever at Red China. Possibly the Russians worry that Peking might be off and running diplomatically all by itself, stealing the Kremlin's thunder and slamming the Asian door in the Russian face.

The Soviet press tells Peking it is playing a "dangerous political game" which violates "proleterian internationalism." The Kremlin interprets that phrase to mean that Moscow calls all the Communist shots.

Part of this dangerous game was, by Chinese admission, a go at "brinksmanship." While all this was going on, there were hints from Peking that it was willing to talk, even with the United States.

Foreign Minister Chen Yi, a man reputed to detest all foreigners, including Russians, told a Japanese reporter that China was ready to improve relations with any nation, and "the United States is no exception."

Chen called the question of Formosa, held by the Nationalist Chinese, the key issue in U.S.-Chinese relations, but added that "the Chinese government repeatedly has expressed its willingness to settle the Sino-U.S. dispute." The basis, of course, would be U.S. withdrawal of military protection from Chiang Kai-shek's regime on Formosa.

Red China, said Chen, never would accept the theory, of "two Chinas." The Nationalists don't accept it, either. At the same time, Chen said Peking could be patient about getting into the United Nations, and he guardedly forecast a change in the U.S. attitude which some day might lead to recognition of Peking's claims.

Americans no longer seem shocked — as they would have been a few years ago—by talk of negotiating with Red China. Some are saying that such talks, if they had no other virtue, might postpone a showdown for years and provide a period of grace in which to await world developments.

The U.S. election campaign this year can becloud the American foreign policy picture. But the elections will be over in November. Meanwhile, there may be some thinking that the bull should be taken by the horns, so that at least one political reality that is impending will not have the look of disaster for American policy.

Lou Ann Lange Enroute For Denmark Stay

Lou Ann Lange, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lange, 907 West Broadway, American Field Service student sponsored by the AAUW, is on her way to Denmark for the summer.

The Lange's drove Lou Ann to Kansas City Friday, June 26, where she was fortunate to meet a group of other students leaving on the same flight. The group included a girl from California going to Germany, two girls from Kansas City, one going to Germany and the other to France, and a boy from Independence, going to Turkey.

Leaving by TWA out of Kansas City at 1 p.m. they arrived at Kennedy Airport at 5:27 p.m. Lou Ann stayed at the Commodore Hotel and were taken by bus at 9:30 Saturday morning from the Hotel to the pier from where she sailed on the MV Seven Seas at noon that day.

The ship will arrive in Rotterdam on July 7, where it will be met by an AFS representative and will travel from there by special train to Denmark with students going to all the Scandinavian countries. Approximately 45 students are going to Denmark.

Lou Ann will stay with the Holger Gertsen family who have a daughter, Ruth, near her age, in Norresundly. She will be there until Aug. 25, at which time all the summer students will return to Copenhagen and spend time together living at a youth hostel with four Danish chaperones. On Aug. 30 they will go by special train to Rotterdam and return to the United States on the Seven Seas with American chaperones.

Lodge to St. Louis In Scranton Drive

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Former South Viet Nam ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge is scheduled to come to St. Louis Tuesday to campaign for Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton.

Scranton is seeking the Republican nomination for president.

The ambassador will attend a luncheon and news conference at the Metropolitan St. Louis Press Club. Lodge then will attend a reception sponsored by the Scranton for President Committee.

Sunnyside Club Given Program By 4-H Members

Three 4-H club members gave a program June 30 for Sunnyside Extension Club at Vermont Park. Miss Sue Ann Knaus gave a sewing demonstration. Miss Martie Thomas told how to make a salad with eye-appeal for a small child. Description of the trip to Washington, D.C., with six 4-H members from Pettis County was made by Miss Patty Mewes.

Mrs. G. A. Ragland gave a lesson on processing storage, cooking of pork, followed by an audience participation quiz.

Roll call was answered with "A Favorite Summer Dessert."

Mrs. John Knaus conducted the business meeting.

Contributive luncheon was served to nine members, nine children, and Mrs. Larry Hall, wife of the new Pettis County director, was a guest.

Mrs. Knaus reported on the council meeting.

A nominating committee will be selected at the July 28 meeting at Vermont Park. A family life lesson will be given. Roll call will be answered with safety ideas.

Since World War II annual U. S. steelmaking capacity has risen more than 60 per cent.

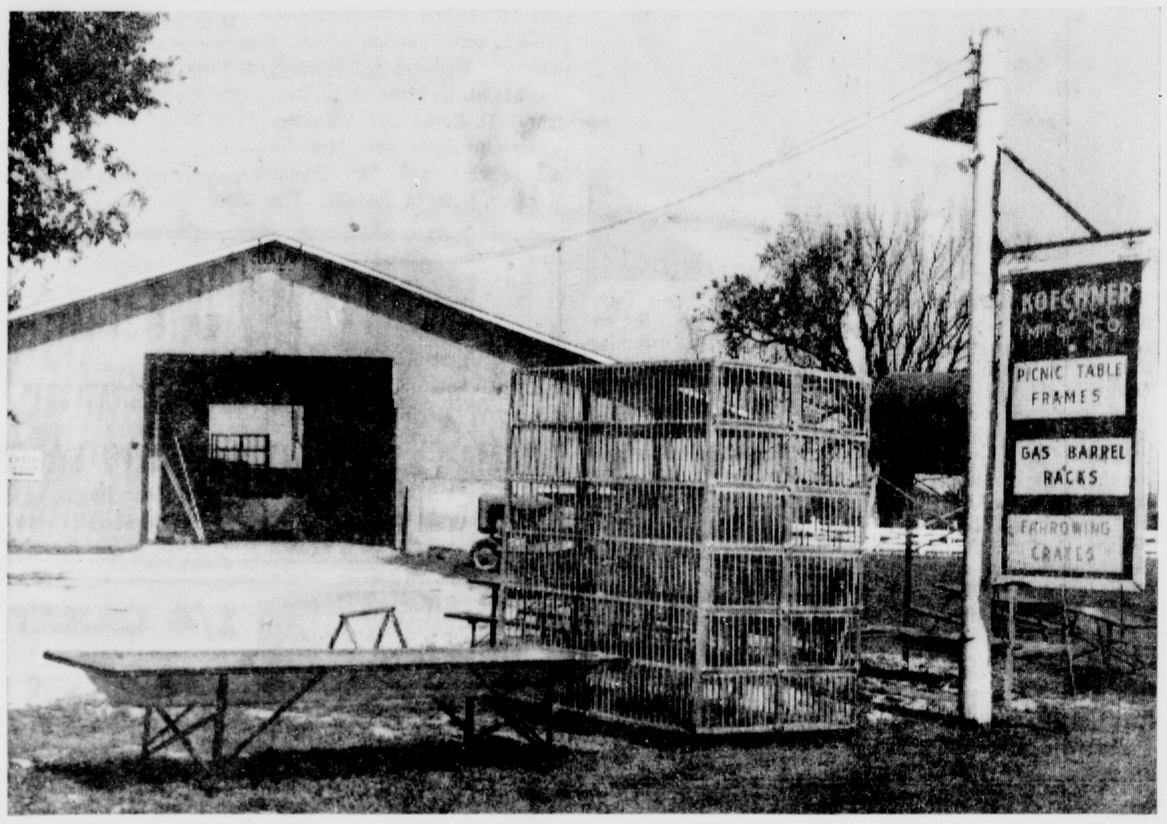
THE SEDALIA DEMOCRAT

Sunday, July 5, 1964 — In Combination With The Sedalia Capital — Feature Section



DIVERSIFIED MANUFACTURER — This 44x80 foot metal building is headquarters for the Koechner Mfg. Company at Tipton which produces angle iron products. In the foreground are a few main items including a feedbunk, poultry trucking coop, barrel racks and picnic tables. Complete construction and painting is done in this structure. Koechner also has a storage overhang adjoining the main building and uses three other storage buildings on the Koechner home farm. (Democrat-Capital photos).

Rough Go On Farm Turns Tiptonite to Small Industry

Little Waste In Items Of Angle Iron

By LARRY EMBRY

His father's tinkering and his own rough go at farming turned a young Tipton farmer to manufacturing angle iron products—a growing business not far removed from the farm and closely related to agricultural needs.

Cecil Koechner, a 33-year-old Navy veteran, is the working head of a small industry turning out picnic table frames, gas barrel racks, hog farrowing crates, poultry trucking coops, feed bunk frames and a recently-added light weight boom for farm tractors.

He started in angle iron products four years ago on the farm of his father, Joseph Koechner, who died in December, 1963. Two years ago Koechner needed more space for expansion and moved to a rented steel building on the Louis J. Knipp, Sr. farm on Highway 50 just east of Tipton.

The business spawned largely from the tinkerings of the senior Mr. Koechner after he retired from farming, Cecil confides.

"A friend of Dad's, L. L. Knipp, bought a picnic table frame and gave $16 for it. The frame was partly of wood and Dad thought it was just too expensive. He made a better frame out of angle iron and asked $10 to $12 for them, but since he was buying iron in small quantities and more or less tinkering it wasn't too profitable."

"We took over from Dad and it wasn't a full-time job at first. I was working at Fischer's (a Tipton pool table manufacturing firm) and here at night."

Koechner's "we" refers to him and his wife, Margaret Ann, who does the firm's bookkeeping and talks about the business as knowingly as her husband does. They have a family of two boys and a girl. Koechner had tried farming for two years before turning to the angle iron business.

The start that Koechner and his father needed came when theirs was the low sealed bid on 100 picnic table frames for the Missouri Park Board.

"Since then we've sold over 1,000 to the park board and over 2,000 in all," he said.

Picnic table frames keep the business going in the winter because park boards want new tables while employees have time to fit them out and prepare for summer use. Normally the parks buy only the frames and fit their own planking.

But a simple product used mainly on the farm is Koechner's mainstay.

"Barrel racks are our bread and butter. Farmers use them for farm tank storage and anyplace where an elevated tank is needed. Two men can turn out about 100 a week."

Items made from angle iron are almost limitless and Koechner's plant is diversified.

"The thing about angle iron is it's easy to work with. If you keep everything in angle iron, you can buy in full 20-foot lengths and use any waste on smaller items like carts and racks. There is practically no waste.

"We sold a lot of hog farrowing crates at first. But the hog market has been so bad lately I'll bet we haven't sold 30 this year. What it amounts to is there are no new farmers starting up in the hog business."

Koechner's latest addition to his line is a tractor boom pole, which he describes as a farm labor saver he began making to take up slack in the production operation. The boom is far lighter than most such devices and can lift over a ton of weight 10 feet high.

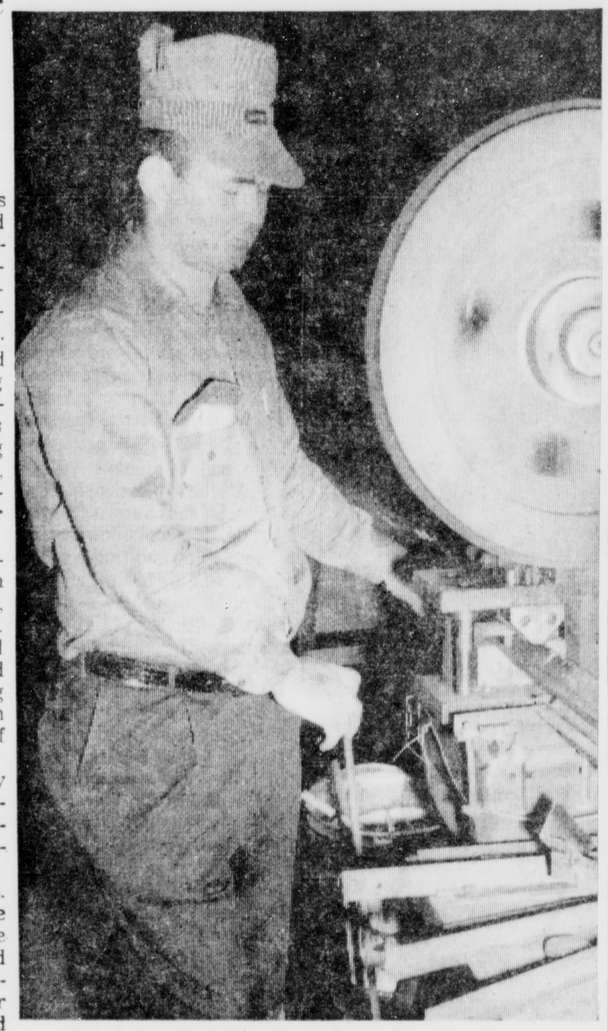
Poultry coops for truckers are fabricated at the plant from sheet steel and angle iron. Turkey haulers are the main buyers of the coops which are ready to mount on a truck and Koechner recently turned out an order for Thomas Fisher's poultry firm here in Sedalia.

"We don't stock turkey coops, however, because everybody wants them just a little bit different. We make them on order," he said.

Koechner's firm provides the frame for an extremely durable livestock feed bunk, which Paul Williams of Windsor produces. Williams molds the fiberglass bunks at his farm and the bunks are mounted on an angle iron frame.

Next on Koechner's list of products is a miniature windmill he hopes to produce in volume by the first of the year and market as a yard ornament.

The windmill also was his father's idea and local interest in the one standing in his mother's yard has been high. It stands 7½ feet tall and Koechner hopes to market the windmill for $40 to $45.



LITTLE WASTE MATERIAL—Cecil Koechner likes working with angle iron because there is little waste. Here he operates a powerful cutting machine which chops the iron into desired length. Scrap and shorter pieces go into smaller items.

WELDER AT WORK—A summer employee of the Koechner firm, Maurice Oligschlaeger, senior mathematics major at Missouri University, spot welds iron bars on a turkey coop. Fabricated of iron and sheet steel on special order, the coops are mounted on trucks for hauling poultry. The firm builds the coops to any size or specification.

New Hoodlum Priest Roams Slum Streets

By JERRY CURRY

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — Another "hoodlum priest" walks the slums of St. Louis looking for souls to save among society's rejects.

He is the Rev. Fred L. Zimmerman, a tough-talking 56-year-old Jesuit who runs famed Dismas House, a center for rehabilitating criminals. He took over when the center's founder, the Rev. Charles Dismas Clark, died last summer.

Father Clark, dubbed the "hoodlum priest" by newspapermen, founded Dismas House in the midst of one of the city's worst slum and crime areas. It became a non-sectarian organization to help ex-convicts transcend the barrier from prison to split-level society.

Like his predecessor, Father Zimmerman talks the con's language.

"You don't want to be a con," he tells a smooth-talking ex-convict in a pool hall. "You want to be a square. You want to work eight hours a day and have kids and make a living like all the other squares."

Zimmerman's sermons — if they can be called that — generally take place in pool halls, littered slum streets, bars and jails. They're personal and to the point.

"I get in there and rack the balls and play pool with them," he says. "If they're in jail, I go into their cells and talk tough with 'em. If they're in bars or in the streets, I go after 'em."

But Father Zimmerman spends most of his time in Dismas House, an old red brick structure that used to be a school.

The balding Jesuit walks briskly through Dismas House like the school principal he used to be. The men nod greetings.

"We try to get these men jobs. When a man earns some money of his own that he didn't steal, it's bound to be a good feeling," he says. "Then he needs to leave Dismas House and completely divorce himself from his old environment. This makes it easier for him to rehabilitate."

Dismas House usually has from 40 to 60 residents.

"I think supervision and the advice the men ask for is the only way to rehabilitate hoodlums," Father Zimmerman says. "It's just a simple fact: If a man doesn't want to rehabilitate, he won't. The only security some of them have had is when they're in prison."

Church Life Dwindling In Soviet Union

By PRESTON GROVER

ODESSA, U.S.S.R. (AP)—There is a little outpost of Christianity here that gives a small picture of what the life of the church has become in the Soviet Union.

It is one of the four seminaries allowed in the Soviet Union for training priests for the Orthodox Church. In Czarist times there were 57.

These four are supposed to train all the priests needed for a church following which Orthodox officials claim exceeds 50 million. The Communist party says it is much less. There is no possibility of a correct census. There are about 225 million people in the Soviet Union and atheism is the state doctrine.

A small group of Western and Communist correspondents were given permission to visit the seminary here recently, but most of the Communists stayed away.

In the little seminary about 50 students study under 13 priests in conditions that appear almost ideal. There is a fine garden and the study rooms are quiet and well furnished. But the view from the front gate must be something formidable for a priest to face on graduation: He goes out into a world officially hostile to the very idea of religion.

From this seminary he is assigned to a village. Young priests going into the villages are required to marry. That is an old tradition of the church. If they are selected to continue their studies they can become monks, with all the higher posts in the church available to them.

We were received at the seminary called "The Great Fountain," by Archmandrite Antoni, a tall, bearded man of about 40. For him it was a hard conference to conduct—a Communist party member was sitting in on the talks.

The first question was, "Do the Komsomols bother you?" These are the young Communists who are supposed to be the most active in combatting religious beliefs in the Soviet Union.

Archmandrite Antonio replied that the Komsomols gave no trouble, nor, he said with a smile, do they apply to study at the seminary.

Two years ago the seminary had 200 students. A year ago the exemption of students of religion from military duty was abolished. For this and other reasons enrollment in the seminary shrank.

LIGHTWEIGHT FEEDBUNK — Koechner lifts a feedbunk with one hand showing how light the model is. The Koechner firm manufactures the angle iron frame and Paul Williams, Windsor, molds the fiberglass bunk. Lightness, durability and weather resistance are qualities of the fiberglass and iron construction.

Frank Sinatra Directing First Movie

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fearless Frank Sinatra is directing his first movie — although directors who have directed him might argue the point.

But, officially, Frank is director of "None But the Brave," and his behavior is adding one more chapter in the life story of this most complex of Hollywood stars.

Sinatra the actor is a "one take" specialist, impatient with actors who require more.

Sinatra the director is the opposite. A young actor hired for a bit that will take all of 10 seconds on the screen spoke his line and made a fast exit.

"Hey, Charlie," said Sinatra, who calls everybody Charlie, "You make an exit like that and you walk right out of the picture business. There's nothing more important in show business than getting off stage."

Then for 15 minutes, he patiently taught the youngster how to exit at the right camera angle.

Fearless Frank—so called because he's the only novice director who would start with a cast that mostly doesn't speak English—also acts in the picture.

He doesn't have the biggest role. These go to Clint Walker, television's "Cheyenne," and Tatsuya Mihashi, a top Japanese actor.

Walker, who would make three of Sinatra, thinks the singer is the most relaxed director he has worked for.

"Frank knows I'm not used to acting without a horse under me," says big Clint. "He's very tolerant about that."

Ten other key roles are played by Japanese actors who don't understand English.

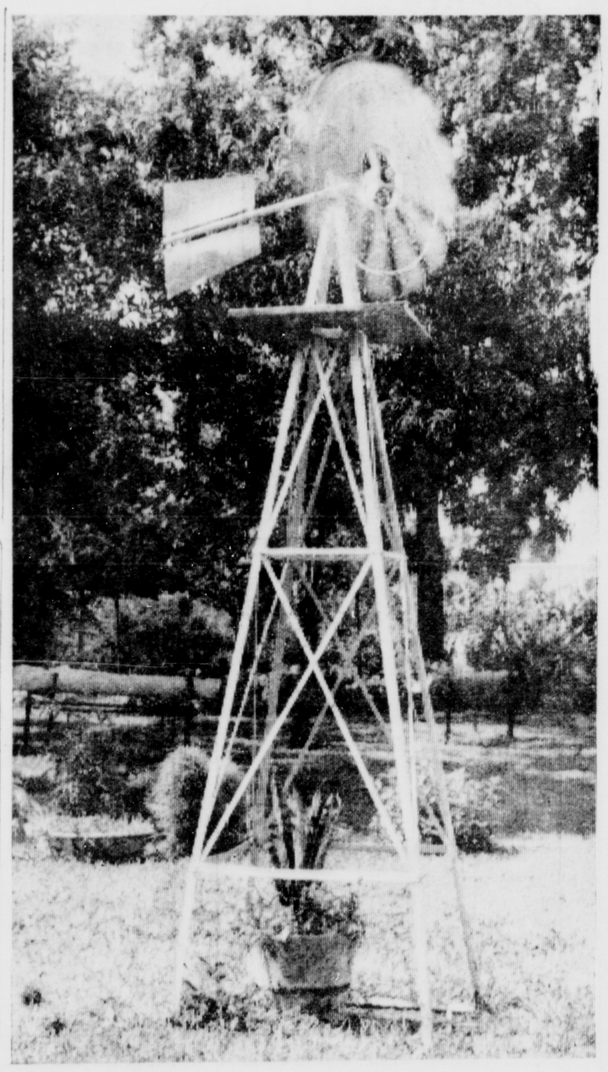
An assistant director interprets for Sinatra.

"I first felt the urge to direct five years ago," says Sinatra. "Directing is the real challenge of this business. Movies are a director's medium."

Then Sinatra stepped in front of the cameras and did a difficult scene where he amputates the leg of a wounded Japanese soldier on a South Pacific Island in World War II. The act of mercy produces a temporary truce between Marines and Japanese soldiers.

Sinatra the actor did the scene in one take and then Sinatra, the director yelled "Print it."

"Spontaneity is my style. I can't work any other way. Some people say I wing it. Before I do a scene, I have read the script 50 times. Is that winging it?"



YARD ORNAMENT — For the American yard that has everything, Koechner's firm hopes to capitalize on this miniature windmill as a lawn ornament. He plans to put the windmill in production by Jan. 1 and market them for about $40. The windmill stands 7½ foot tall, is completely of metal construction and its ball bearing fan spins with realism.

Ducking Stool

A ducking stool, a chair for the punishment of scolds, witches and prostitutes, was used in England as late as the 19th century.

Record Turkey Crop Predicted for Year

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP)—Missouri turkey growers are expected to turn out the largest turkey crop in the state's history this year.

Leonard Voss, agricultural economist at the University of Missouri reports an estimate of 5,750,000 birds. This is slightly higher than the previous record in 1961 and about 10 per cent above the 1963 crop.

More than 12,000 persons are killed in accidents on U.S. farms each year.

Old Log House Is Moved From Versailles Site

An old log house, said to be the oldest building in Versailles, located between the Methodist church and Yarnell's Service Station, North Fisher Street, is being torn down.

The crudely constructed building was first built on South Monroe Street where it was part of the "Grandma Long Inn" stagecoach travelers could stay overnight.

In 1953, it was sold to a Mr. and Mrs. Martin of the State of Virginia. They moved it to north Monroe Street, where it was used as a lodging place for traveling salesmen. It was later moved to its present location.

White oak logs used in the walls and floor joists were hewn by hand and marks of the broad axes still remain even though they were made more than 100 years ago. Front and back door casings were hand hewn as were the laths used on the inner walls.

The present owner of the old house is Mrs. Lillian Arnold.

According to later reports, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Robertson, who own a fishing resort southeast of Versailles, have bought the old log building and will move it to their farm, known as "Acres of Diamonds."

Greeks Face Shortage Of Labor Force

By PHILIP DOPOLOUS

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — There are fewer Greek babies nowadays. At the same time the country is losing 100,000 emigrants a year. The Greek government faces the prospect of a developing labor shortage.

The Athens Chamber of Commerce and Industry notes a lack of hands for this year's harvest of cotton, olives, tobacco and raisins. "Lack of labor for the country's growing industries is also known," it says.

The basic motives for emigration are an insufficiency of new employment, technological unemployment and the difference in wages paid in Greece and other Western European nations.

Most Greek students who study abroad refuse to return home, creating a shortage of technically trained personnel.

More people are emigrating every year than are reaching the working age of 16.

In 1938 the birthrate was 26 births per 1,000 persons. Last year it was 18 per 1,000.

The population has remained fairly steady, at around 8½ million, and in fact it rose 1 per cent last year due to longer life and repatriation. Many Greeks are returning from Egypt, African nations and Turkey, where commercial restrictions and political upheavals have forced them to abandon businesses.

Mrs. Sammy Ray Taylor

Miss Minerva Deuschle Marries Mr. Sammy Ray Taylor June 21

St. Paul's United Church of Christ was the scene of the marriage of Miss Minerva Deuschle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Deuschle, Pilot Grove, and Mr. Sammy Ray Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Taylor, Nelson, at seven o'clock Sunday eveniny, June 21.

The Rev. Velray Fulton, pastor, read the double ring ceremony before an altar banked with potted ferns, basket arrangements of white glatioli with greenery, and two seven branch brass candelabra, holding burning white tapers. The main altar was adorned with urns of white hydrangeas and cathedral tapers in brass candleholders.

Mrs. Clarence Ries, organist, played wedding selections preceding the ceremony, and the traditional wedding marches. She accompanied Mrs. D. I. Sevier, who sang, "O Promise Me" and "The Lord's Prayer," as the couple knelt at the altar.

Candlelighters were Mr. Gordon Deuschle, brother of the bride, and Mr. Ronnie Deuschle, cousin of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a gown of Chantilly lace over taffeta. The slender lace over tulle bodice was designed with a scalloped portrait neckline and elbow length sleeves, accented with dainty scallops. The back bodice, closed with tiny fabric covered buttons, was fashioned with a criss-cross cummerbund of satin. Released pleats formed the fullness of the lace over taffeta skirt, which was topped with an oval-shaped voluminous overskirt of bridal satin, drifting into an aisle wide train. She wore long gloves to complete her costume.

Her bouffant veil of silk illusion was attached to a crown of tear drop pearls and rhinestones. She carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations, adorned with white net and satin streamers, tied in lovers' knots. Her only jewelry was a pearl necklace with earrings to match.

Miss Rosemary Deuschle, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a street length dress of jacquard blue lace, fashioned with a basque bodice. The portrait neckline was scalloped and short sleeves were edged with scallops. The lower front waistline dipped to a point in the center, and the back bodice was closed with tiny fabric covered buttons. Unpressed pleats formed the bouffant skirt.

Her circlet hat of blue, adorned with simulated pearls, secured her veil of blue nylon net. She wore blue gloves and matching slippers. She carried a bouquet of pink gladioli finished with white satin streamers, tied in lovers' knots.

Miss Peggy Deuschle and Mrs. Dennis Stuckey, sisters of the bride, served as bridesmaids. Their costumes and headdresses were styled like that of the maid of honor. They wore matching blue accessories and carried bouquets of pink and white gladioli with satin streamers.

Miss Marcia Bergman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bergman, and Miss Sandra Hilden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hilden, Boonville, were flower girls. They wore dresses of white jacquard lace styled with snug bodices featuring plastrons outlined with daisy medallions and short puffed sleeves. The bouffant skirts were complimented with daisy medallions on the hemlines. Bows of matching material accented the waistlines. They wore headbands of white roses, securing veils of white net. They carried baskets of rose petals.

Ring bearers were Master Kerry Stuckey and Master Larry Stuckey, nephews of the bride.

Mr. John Mothersbaugh, Leavenworth, Kan., served as best man for Mr. Taylor. Groomsmen were Mr. Gary Walker, Marshall, and Mr. Dennis Stuckey, St. Louis.

Ushering duties were performed by Mr. Larry Deuschle, Kansas City, cousin of the bride, and Mr. Jack Daleen, Sedalia.

Mrs. Deuschle chose for her daughter's wedding an imported nylon pink lace dress over satin, with white accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses.

The mother of the bridegroom wore a two piece ensemble of turquoise dacron, with white accessories. She wore a corsage of Talisman roses.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church dining area, with 200 guests attending.

The bride's table was draped with white net over satin, caught at intervals and centered with blue rosettes. Placed on the table was a hand-crocheted lace cloth, made by Mrs. Henry Stone. The table, edged in greenery, was placed under a canopy of blue and white streamers, completed with a white wedding bell.

Tht triple tiered wedding cake, decorated with blue and white sugar roses and wedding bells, was topped with a miniature bridal couple. White shasta daisies and greenery encircled the cake, which was flanked with three tiered branch candelabra holding lighted blue tapers.

Mrs. David Wittman, Syracuse, aunt of the bride, served cake. Mrs. Carl Deuschle, aunt of the bride, presided at the punch bowl. They were assisted by Mrs. Herman Hilden, Mrs. Arthur Twillman, Boonville, cousins of the bridegroom.

Miss Phyllis Korte assisted at the guest book.

Miss Helen Marie Deuschle, cousin of the bride, and Miss Donna Twillman, cousin of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Jack Daleen attended the gift table.

The bride chose for her going away costume, a two-piece yellow eyelet over dacron dress with white accessories. Her corsage was detached from the bridal bouquet.

The couple will reside in Sedalia.

The bride is a 1962 graduate of Pilot Grove High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of Nelson High School with the class of 1955 and served two years in the United States Army.

The bride is employed as a secretary with the Underwriters Adjusting Co. in Sedalia. The bridegroom is employed by the Montgomery Ward Store.

A rehearsal dinner was served June 20 at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Deuschle, for members of the bridal party and the families.

The bride was complimented at several bridal showers before her marriage. Mrs. Clarence Bergman gave a shower at her country home. She was assisted by Mrs. Karl Bergman and Mrs. Virgil Schupp.

A shower was given in honor of the bride at the Rod and Gun Club by Miss Glenda Larm, Miss Phyllis Korte and Miss Mary Elaine Spaedy.

Murphy-Ziehmer Vows Said in June

First Baptist Church, California, was the scene of the marriage of Miss Andree Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Murphy, California, and Mr. Carl E. Ziehmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Ziehmer, California, at two o'clock Sunday afternoon, June 21.

The Rev. Roy Sparks performed the double ring ceremony before an altar decorated with regal lilies, candelabra and greenery. Miss Sharon Rohrbach, organist, played traditional wedding music and accompanied Mrs. Don Moore as she sang "O Perfect Love" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white peau de soie, fashioned with a round neckline and long tapered sleeves coming to points at the wrists and accented with tiny pearl buttons. The skirt featured soft unpressed pleats which fell to form a gentle bell shaped effect. The back was enhanced by a court train of Alencon lace, which fell from the shoulders.

Her veil of French illusion was attached to a double crown of pearls and aurora borealis crystals. Her only jewelry was a single strand of cultured pearls, a gift from the bridegroom. She carried a cascade bouquet of four white Jasette orchids with showers of white Stephanotis.

Miss Janet Ziehmer, sister of the bridegroom was maid of honor. She wore a street length dress of yellow taffeta. The fitted bodice had a scoop neckline with a double flat bow on each shoulder. The skirt was pleated. Her face length veil of yellow nylon tulle was attached to a band of yellow taffeta. Her slippers were matching yellow. She carried a nosegay of white pompon chrysanthemums and greenery with white streamers.

Miss Beverly Bieri was bridesmaid. She wore a dress like that of the maid of honor and carried similar flowers.

Pvt. F. A. Ziehmer, Ft. Benning, Ga., brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Mr. Kenneth Ziehmer, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman.

Miss Julie Ann Ziehmer, sister of the bridegroom, was flower girl. Her dress was of white peau de soie in A-line style. The dress featured a round neckline and short cap sleeves. The front neckline was accented with a yellow bow and streamers. She carried a yellow basket of flower petals.

Master Patrick A. Murphy, brother of the bride, was ringbearer.

Ushers were Mr. William F. Murphy, Lohman, cousin of the bride, and Mr. Hilton Schlup, California. Ushers also served as candlelighters.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Murphy wore a beige lace dress over taffeta. Her accessories were bone and her corsage was of white carnations.

The bridegroom's mother wore a light blue silk crepe with accessories of bone and a corsage of white carnations.

A reception followed the wedding in the church dining room. The bride's table was covered with a white imported Irish linen cloth. The three tiered wedding cake was decorated with yellow roses and a miniature bride and bridegroom.

Serving were Mrs. S. A. Duvall, Jefferson City, Mrs. Harold Lademann, Kirksville, aunts of the bride, Mrs. Jack Ziehmer, aunt of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Ralph Featherstone, Kansas City.

At the guest register was Miss Julie Lademann, Kirksville, cousin of the bride.

Presiding at the gift table were Mrs. Jimmy Murphy, of Belleville, Ill., cousin of the bride and Miss Sandra Allee. Others assisting were Linda Ziehmer and Miss Katie Meisenheimer.

For traveling, the bride chose a pale yellow sheath dress. Her accessories were white patent. She wore the orchid corsage from the bridal bouquet.

After a short wedding trip, the couple will reside at 309 Randolph Street, California.

The bride is a 1964 graduate of California High School. The bridegroom is a 1961 graduate of California High School and is employed as a carpenter with his father.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Murphy entertained at a rehearsal dinner Saturday evening, June 20, at the American Legion Home, California.

Miss Carolyn Imler Entertained at Party

Misses Mary Ketterlin, Dottie Forster and Linda Orscheln, Tipton, entertained at a bridal shower June 26 in honor of Miss Carolyn Imler at Miss Ketterlin's home.

The room was decorated with green and white streamers with wedding bells and flowers.

After the bride-to-be opened gifts, refreshments of green and white cake and green punch were served from a table covered with lace over green and centered with a bouquet of white roses.

Miss Imler and Russell Gibson, Cherry Point, N.C., are to be united in marriage July 18 at the Tipton Christian Church.

Mr. Lloyd Lewellen, Route 2, announces the engagement of his daughter, Sandra, to Mr. Myron L. Jones, Columbia. Miss Lewellen is also the daughter of the late Mrs. Lewellen. The bride-to-be is a graduate of Smithton High School. She is a senior in the University of Missouri School of Journalism, Columbia. Mr. Jones is the son of Mrs. Earle A. Jones, Waitsfield, Vt., and the late Mr. Jones. The prospective bridegroom was graduated from the University of Vermont in 1963. He is employed by the Missouri State Highway Department and is scheduled to receive a master's degree in civil engineering from MU next year. The wedding is planned for Aug. 29 at Smithton Methodist Church.

Major and Mrs. Sam Tuck, Houstonia, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Barbara Geanne to Mr. Larry Brooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rayburn Brooks, 2336 West Third. An October wedding is planned.

Edmundson-Thompson Vows Said in Chapel

Miss Helen Edmundson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Edmundson, LaMonte, and Mr. Larry Dean Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wells H. Thompson, Knob Noster, were married at eight o'clock Sunday evening, June 26 at the College Chapel on the campus of Central Missouri State College, Warrensburg.

The altar was decorated with one large candle holder in the center, flanked by baskets of white gladioli.

Miss Diana Likely, Green Ridge, organist, played traditional wedding music before the ceremony.

The bride wore a plain white sheath of silk shantung with a white lace over jacket. The jacket had three quarter length sleeves and a plain high neck. The bride carried white carnations tied with blue ribbons.

Miss Sarah Jane Neitzert, Knob Noster, cousin of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a light blue sheath with three quarter length sleeves and carried white carnations tied with white ribbons.

Best man was Mr. Fred Allan of Knob Noster.

The mother of the bride selected a navy blue sheath and white accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations.

A pink sheath of lace and black accessories were worn by the bridegroom's mother. Her corsage was also of white carnations.

The couple took a short trip to the Lake of the Ozarks after the ceremony. Knob Noster Trailer Park will be the residence of the couple.

The bride is a 1962 graduate of Green Ridge High School and is a junior at CMS.

The bridegroom, a 1960 graduate of Knob Noster High School, attended CMS and is employed by The Boeing Co.

Before relatives, friends and the congregation of Federated United Church of Christ, Mrs. Loretta Roose became the bride of the Rev. Dr. Leonard H. Reifel, pastor of the church, at eight o'clock Sunday evening, June 28. The Rev. Harry Boughy, pastor of St. John's United Church of Christ, Florence, read the double ring vows.

Two lighted tapers bracketed two altar floral arrangements.

Mrs. C. C. DeLozier, played organ selections.

The bride wore a street length gown of beige silk chiffon with floating back panels. Her headdress was a petal pouf of beige with matching accessories. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and glacier ivy, accented in the center with tangerine carnations.

Mrs. William E. Hurlbut, matron of honor, wore a costume of Dior blue silk linen with accessories in the same shade. A mauve Cymbidium orchid was attached to a white purse and carried by Mrs. Hurlbut.

Best man was Mr. William E. Hurlbut.

Head usher was Mr. Wallace Hitaffer. Other ushers were Mr. Kenneth U. Love, Mr. Bruce W. Richey and Mr. James DeWitt.

Mrs. Raymond P. Wilson attended the guest book.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Emilie Buresh, Omaha, Neb., selected for her daughter's wedding, a pale blue French lace costume, accessorized with matching blue. At her shoulder, she wore a corsage of white roses.

Guests, numbering 160 were received at a church reception after the ceremony. The bride's daughters, Mrs. Loyd Lancaster of the State of California, and Miss Christina Roose, presided at the bridal table. They served fruit punch from a large bowl of fluted ice with pink roses frozen in suspension. The bowl was illuminated at the base and encircled with greenery. Silver candelabra held burning pink tapers.

Women of Federated Service Guild with Mrs. Philip Hoffman, president, made reception arrangements. Members assisting were: Mrs. Bruce Richey, Mrs. Ida Hoffman, Mrs. Amelia Haney, Mrs. Kenneth U. Love, Mrs. F. C. Wilhite, Mrs. Wallace Hitaffer, Mrs. William E. Hurlbut, Mrs. Charles Callis, Mrs. Ed Brummet, Jr., and Miss Linda Callis, Mrs. A. A. Will He Meet Castro In Battle?

By TOM NOLAN

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — A Cuban who once wanted to be nothing more than a loyal soldier of his government is now the military leader of a major new anti-Castro group.

He is tall, muscular Erneido Oliva, one of the five men heading the Cuban Representation in Exile which recently outlined its aims at a Washington meeting.

As a fellow Cuban talked, Oliva listened intently. At the words, "to work out its own battle plans to attain the liberty of Cuba," Oliva nodded vigorous assent. He will be responsible for those plans.

The young former officer has had some experience in the line already. He was second in command of Assault Brigade 2506 at the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion.

OLIVA: He didn't want to be a revolutionary.

Oliva defected from Cuba to Miami on Aug. 18, 1960. It was not an easy decision, for he was a dedicated officer, a graduate of Managua (Cuba) Cadet School. He was then serving the Castro government as a general inspector of agrarian reform throughout the island.

"I had always wanted to be an architect," Oliva says. "But I couldn't afford the tuition, so I joined the army. After eight years of service, I was very dedicated. The thought of revolution never entered my head.

"I believed in the beginning that Fidel would be good for Cuba. But then he began his propaganda attack against the Americans. I was close to the United States all along. American aid furnished the .75 mm battery I was trained on.

"In other Latin - American countries there might have been hate for the 'Yanquis,' but there never was in Cuba until Fidel came.

"Then Fidel sold out to communism. I was bitterly disillusioned. As a lifelong Catholic, I could not support communism."

When Castro overthrew the Cuban dictatorship of Fulgencio Batista in January, 1959, Oliva was in a military job overseas. Summoned to Havana, he met Castro for the first time. Oliva tells the following anecdote:

Chewing his cigar, Castro asked bluntly: "Do you know how Americans fight?"

"Yes," Oliva answered.

"Can we fight them now?"

"Impossible," the stunned Oliva shot back.

"Well," muttered Castro, "we will someday."

After defecting, Oliva was thoroughly questioned and tested by the Frente, the Cuban civilian exile organization. Accepted, he was shipped to Guatemala, training site of the brigade. He was named second in command to Jose Perez (Pepe) San Roman, now a second lieutenant at the U. S. Army's Language School in Monterey, Calif.

At the Bay of Pigs, Oliva's battalion of 370 men held the brigade's right flank for over 24 hours against 2,100 of Castro's troops supported by 20 Stalin tanks. One of Castro's doctors who later refected estimated that Oliva's force killed 500 of the enemy, wounded 1,000 others. They knocked out six of the tanks.

Oliva's losses: 15 killed, 40 wounded.

Following the defeat of the brigade, he spent 20 months in various Cuban prisons. He returned to Miami in December 1962, when the survivors were ransomed.

The other four men heading the Cuban Representation in Exile are lawyer Ernesto Freyre, accountant Aurellio Fernandez Diaz, union organizer Vincente Rubiera and law student Jorge Mas. They and Oliva were selected by a committee of exiles. Their names were presented for approval by mail to some 75,000 Cuban exiles. They were endorsed nearly unanimously.

One of Oliva's goals is to coordinate the actions of other exile groups, such as the Movement for Revolutionary Recuperation, led by Manuel Artime; the Revolutionary Junta, headed by Manuel Ray; and Alpha 66, led by Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo.

Oliva's group is well financed. One of its supporters is Jose M. Bosch, head of the Bacardi Rum Company.

Asked if the group may be wary of U. S. aid following the withdrawal of air support at the Bay of Pigs by the late President Kennedy, Oliva indignantly asks:

"If we cannot trust the United States, who can we trust? The Russians?"

Loch Ness Monster Is 'In Love'

FORT AUGUSTUS, Scotland (AP)—Is the Loch Ness monster in love?

The thing said to inhabit the dark waters of the Loch has been acting strangely lately. Also it's summer in the highlands.

He's been reported rearing his ugly head and scorching about the loch like a PT boat one day and brooding in silence the next.

On the heather hillsides the gorse is in bloom and the pied wagtails and water-ousels mare feeding their impatient young.

So, the highland folk say, why shouldn't it be courting time for monsters too?

To almost everyone in Fort Augustus, a village crouching on the southern shore of Loch Ness, the monster is real. He's there. And, many say, there's almost certainly more than one.

"I've seen three," says Alexander Campbell nonchalantly, "All at once."

Campbell has been water bailiff at Loch Ness going on 40 years — and he doesn't look as though he's kidding.

The monster first surfaced into the headlines when someone reported spotting him (or her) 31 years ago.

Scientific expeditions have sought it here and sought it there for several years but have always failed to come up with any proof that what the Scots say is true.

Now another expedition has made camp on the shores of the loch to try once again.

It is spending three months here equipped with telescopic movie and still cameras trained constantly on the waters.

"If something does surface," said Ivor Newby, one of the camera crew, "we'll get him good."

"Most sightings have put the thing in these parts," said Newby. "The loch is at its deepest here—about 800 feet."

Descriptions from many sources give the monster a variety of shapes, sizes and colors.

It's head is like a swan, a horse, a dragon, a camel. It has one, two, three, four or seven humps. It's brown, it's black, it's gray. It has stripes.

The latest scientific effort to prove the monster story is sponsored by a pro-monster Conservative member of Parliament, David James.

Troop 54, Boy Scouts Attends Pa He Tsi

Boy Scout Troop 54, sponsored by First Methodist Church, leaves Sunday for Camp Pa He Tsi at the Lake of the Ozarks State Park at Osage Beach. Vernon Rodick, troop committee chairman, will accompany the following members:

One of the principal present uses of whale oil is as an ingredient in oleomargarine. It also is used in soapmaking, for lubricating, for leather dressing and in the manufacture of glycerine for explosives.

Officiated By Catholics, Protestants

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mr. and Mrs. Patrick C. Barker were married recently in what is believed to be the first wedding officiated jointly by Roman Catholic and Protestant clergy.

A Roman Catholic priest, the Rev. Leonard Jackson, and an Episcopal priest, the Rev. Claudius Miller, married the couple June 13 in a suburban Warson Woods Roman Church. Each priest read the vows from the Episcopal book of common prayer. Father Jackson used the exhortation and final blessing from the Roman liturgy.

Barker of St. Louis, is a Roman Catholic. His wife, the former Susan Ekberg of Greenwich, Conn., is Episcopalian. The combined ceremony was arranged by Joseph Cardinal Ritter, archbishop of the St. Louis Roman Diocese, and Bishop George L. Cadigan of the Episcopal Diocese of Missouri. The bride's parents requested the ceremony.

The wedding was not announced until today because the bride and bridegroom wished to avoid publicity before their honeymoon.

A Roman Catholic spokesmen said the wedding was arranged on "a bishop to bishop level."

The spokesmen explained that Roman Catholics and Episcopalians "are not far apart in rituals and ceremonies."

Rodney Ellis Learns Conservation at Camp

Rodney Ellis, Route 1, has enrolled in the Conservation Training Camp at Philmont Scout Ranch in northeastern New Mexico. Sedalia In Step With Nation On Designs of Its Churches

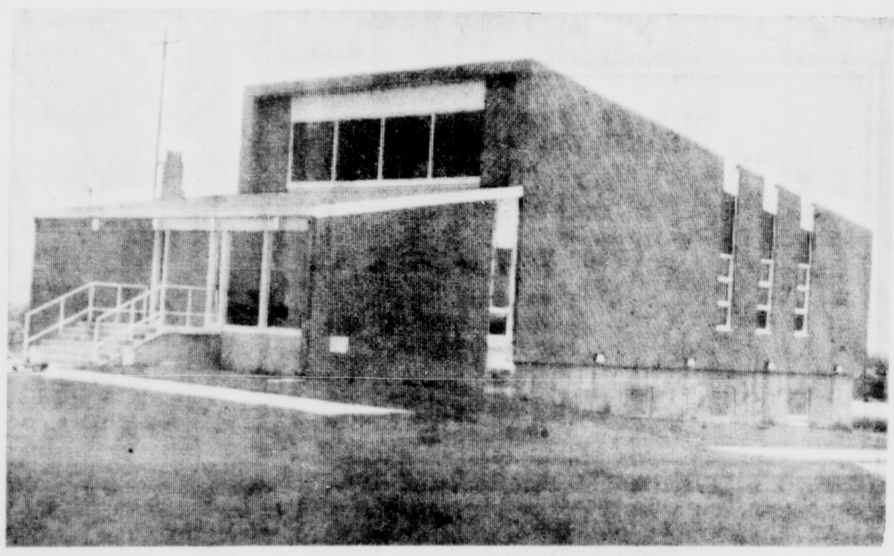
FIRST OF ITS TYPE—This Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the first of this type to be constructed in the Sedalia area. Since its construction in 1959, several churches of this type have been built here.



OUR SAVIOR LUTHERAN—Most people who have seen this church building either love it, or hate it, with no in-between feelings. It is the first unit of Our Savior Lutheran Church, and the congregation loves it. (Democrat-Capital photos)

By RALPH JONES

Most Sedalia religious organizations appear to be following a national trend away from the traditional Gothic type of church architecture in the construction of new churches in this area.

The first departure from the traditional type of construction was noted in Sedalia in 1958, when the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints building on West Broadway began to take form.

Some people eyed the building and noted a radical design. Others wondered why a church should be built with the sweeping roof that reached almost to the ground or each side of the building. But when the building was finished in 1959, all agreed it was beautiful.

Since that time four other new church buildings that have attracted a considerable amount of attention have been completed or are under construction at this time. In three instances the churches have been of contemporary design, while one retains the traditional Gothic influence.

In talking with the architects who designed the buildings it was learned that the nationwide trend in new churches is toward the contemporary design, with the individual designs growing out of the "A-frame" concept of construction.

This type of construction, according to Don Buller of the architectual firm Sammons & Buller of Sedalia, offers more floor space for the least amount of building expense. Most budget-minded church building committees throughout the country select this type of construction, for a beginning, then add on other portions of the church as money becomes available.

Sammons & Buller designed the Trinity Lutheran Church, the First Christian Church and the Gothic-style Broadway Presbyterian Church now nearing completion, in addition to the Bethel Methodist Church on South Highway 65.

The LDS church was designed by John Clawson of Salt Lake City, Utah, in line with a church wide policy of using this type of construction in all new LDS churches.

The local church that has brought about perhaps more comment than any other building in recent years is the Our Savior Lutheran Church on Highway 50 west of Sedalia.

This building, completed this year, was designed by the firm of Monroe-Lefebvre architects, Kansas City, in conformance with the desires of the church building committee.

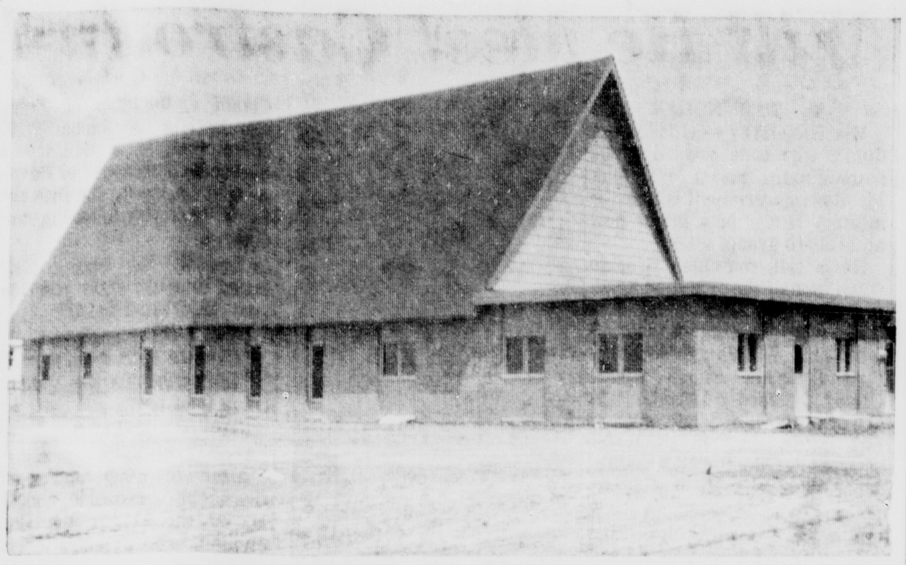
Gene Lefebvre, who designed the building, said, "We have never designed a building like this before, and as a matter of fact we have never seen a building of this type."

The designer added that the present structure is the first of several units that will be added to the church structure later. It was created for the congregation, which wanted a rustic-type building on a somewhat limited budget.

Lefebvre said he attempted to impart this rustic feeling through a play on materials—redwood strips slanted up the side of the building with a space in between. Other buildings are to be connected to this main building through corridors or hallways at a later date.

Both Lefebvre and Buller gave several reasons for the trend away from the Gothic. One was the lower cost of construction in contemporary designs. Another was the difference in modern-day heating and electrical systems, which lend themselves to the present-day functional techniques of construction. Another was the varied types of materials available for building today, compared to the brick-stone-lumber that was available in the days when the older churches were constructed.

Both Buller and Lefebvre agreed that most of the major church denominations are leaning toward the contemporary type of construction, thus in the future the public will see more and more church buildings of this type.



TRINITY LUTHERAN—This new Trinity Lutheran Church is nearing completion. It is of contemporary design favored by most leading religious organizations at this time.

July 22, 23 and 24—Pettis Co. 4-H Achievement Days. Smith-Cotton High School.

Attention Junior Leaders

Ten Pettis County 4-H Junior Leaders are needed again this year to help in the 4-H Building at the State Fair. Seven girls and three boys are needed.

You would work Wednesday, Aug. 19, Thursday, Aug. 20, Friday, Aug. 21, Sunday afternoon and evening, Aug. 30 and Monday morning, August 31.

If you are a Pettis County Junior Leader and wish to work during this time, please make application at the University Extension Center.

Public Speaking Contest

We would like to encourage you 4-H Junior Leaders to enter the 4-H Junior Leader Public Speaking Contest at the Pettis County 4-H Achievement Day on Wednesday afternoon, July 22. The starting time will be 2 p.m.

Presentation must be either a public address or illustrated talk. It must be purposeful, original and preferably 10 minutes in length. The maximum time is 15 minutes.

From the blue ribbon group, one boy and one girl will be selected for District participation. Winners at the District are awarded a $25 saving bond and a Junior Leadership pin.

For more information about the Junior Leader public speaking contest and a list of suggested talk subjects, please contact our office. We have a list of over a hundred different talks that have been given in the past. This will give you an idea for a topic for your talk.

4-H Dairy Judging Event

There were seven 4-H Club members judging in the 4-H Dairy Contest Wednesday at the John Bluhm, Jr., Gerald Volpp and Sam Freund farms. Ribbons received were as follows: Blue: Charles Bohon, South Abell; Bobby Bohon, South Abell; Freddie Kraft, Smelser; Dennis Merk, Smithton; Donnie Merk, Smithton, and Lynn Middleton, South Abell. Red: Dusty Merk, Smithton.

High Scorers in the Holstein division were as follows: Donnie Merk, 140; Bobbie Bohon, 132; Lynn Middleton, 125; and Charles Bohon, 123.

High individuals in the Jersey division were as follows: Charles Bohon, 133; Dennis Merk 119; Bobby Bohon 114; and Dennie Merk 114.

High score for the Guernsey division were as follows: Charles Bohon 121; Dennis Merk 112; Bobby Bohon 103; and Freddie Kraft 101.

In order to participate on the District judging team, a 4-H member must be 14 years of age. Those eligible to be on the team are as follows: Bobby Bohon, Freddie Kraft, Donnie Merk and Lynn Middleton. Charles Bohon had the highest total score for the judging day but is not old enough to be on the team.

4-H Camp Sign-up

The Pettis County 4-H members will have the opportunity to attend 4-H camp again this summer at Camp Bob White, Knob Noster State Park. We will be camping with Johnson county for both camps.

The younger camp, age 12 and under, will be held July 29—August 1. The older camp, age 12 and over, will be held August 1-4.

For those who wish to attend, we will accept your camp fee for $7.85 any time between 8 a.m. Tuesday, July 7th to 5 p. m. Friday, July 10th. Getting your name and fee in to go to 4-H Camp will be handled on a "first come-first served" basis as in the past.

Attention 4-H Leaders and Parents. We will need 12 adult counselors for 4-H camp. We hope you will talk about this in your club so that we might come up with 12 volunteers. Our 4-H members must be properly chaperoned.

Change in 4-H Marriage Rules

All 4-H members who marry prior to July 1st are not eligible to the permanent membership role of that year and succeeding years. One who marries after July 1st shall be allowed to complete the year of work and sell products through 4-H channels. Such a member shall not be eligible to participate in 4-H exhibits, awards, contests, or trips.

Nelson's Nation Can't Handle This Modern Form of Privacy

By TOM A. CULLEN
European Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

LONDON—(NEA) — When a "pirate" radio ship calling itself Radio Caroline started broadcasting pop music off Britain's east coast in March, the government was inclined to laugh it off as a huge joke.

This saucy wench with the black patch over one eye wouldn't last more than two weeks. What Briton would want to listen to disc jockeys broadcasting illegally from beyond the 3-mile limit when he could hear uplifting talks on the British Broadcasting Company network?

But the government was wrong. Operating from a 750-ton passenger ship that has been converted into a radio station, Radio Caroline quickly built an audience of 7 million listeners.

And now Caroline has been joined by another tough-looking buccaneer, Radio Atlanta, a converted timber vessel which is anchored off the east coast seaside resort of Frinton-on-sea. It, too, pipes canned music and commercials to the delighted natives.

Between them, it looks as though the two "pirates" may have blasted a breach in British defenses big enough for commercial radio to crawl through, thus ending BBC's 42-year-old monopoly on radio broadcasting.

Emboldened by the success of Caroline and Atlanta in capturing the housewife's ear, a powerful radio lobby is now clamoring for the government to throw open the whole field of broadcasting to commercial interests.

It appears also that Sir Alec Douglas-Home's Tory government may have landed itself with a red hot issue for the general election in October. The Labor party is opposed to commercial radio in general, and to radio "piracy" in particular, and would like to leave broadcasting in the hands of the BBC.

Meanwhile, the government's policy is to ignore the "pirate" ships off the east coast. They are anchored outside British jurisdictional waters and they fly foreign flags.

Radio Caroline is registered as a Lichtenstein company with Swiss directors. While the ownership of Radio Atlanta is obscure, it is manned by an all-Dutch crew.

Radio "piracy" is not confined to Britain. Five ships are operating off the coasts of Scandinavia and the Netherlands. Sweden, Denmark and Belgium have all passed laws against this activity.

The Swedish law makes it an offense for nationals to take part in broadcasts, to advertise or sponsor programs, or even to supply the "pirate" ships.

The 17-nation Council of Europe is also considering a draft convention to outlaw radio "piracy." The proposal aims at silencing all "pirate" transmitters aboard ships, aircraft and "any other floating or airborne objects." The draft convention, however, would ultimately have to be ratified by each of the 17 countries.

Observers here foresee that off-shore commercial broadcasting may well become an accomplished fact before the 17 nations get around to action.

Reginald Bevins, the British postmaster general, predicts that Britain may soon be "ringed by an armada of pirate ships."

For Radio Caroline is busy raking in the coin. Its original charge was from $196 to $308 per minute.

Another cloud has appeared on the horizon here in the shape of "pirate" television, which is no more than a threat at present. But from Cork, in southern Ireland, comes a report that a commercial television "island" is being built in local shipyards for anchorage off the Dutch coast. Unless the British government acts fast, it looks as though commercial television in- terests may soon be hoisting the not-so-Jolly Roger.

Safety, Family Life Are Bothwell Topics

Mrs. Robert Fenton discussed "Safety With Pesticides" at the July 1 meeting of Bothwell Extension Club at the home of Mrs. Richard Sprinkles. Family living was the topic of Mrs. A. C. Henderson.

Mrs. V. C. Abney, president, presided. Roll call was answered by 18 members with "The First Fourth of July I Remember." Twenty-one children and the following guests were present: Mrs. Beryl McCoy, Mrs. Lee Weir, Mrs. L. R. Reed, Mrs. R. S. Sprinkles, Mrs. E. E. Rehmer and Miss Diane Dewitt.

Secret pal gifts were distributed.

Bothwell 4-H Club will present the program Aug. 5 at Liberty Park.

New Substation Completed For Concordia Area

Construction of a new 34,500 volt electric substation to serve the Concordia area has been completed by Missouri Public Service Company construction crews.

The new substation has a capacity of 2,500 kilowatts which is approximately 2½ times the capacity of the former substation which is being removed near the new location. Company engineers said the substation which has been replaced carried a load close to its capacity of 1,000 kilowatts last summer. The new substation will provide reserve power capacity for load growth projected in the Concordia area. Full load on the new substation is not expected to occur before 1972.

Total cost of the new substation was approximately $50,000. The work also included 1,000 feet of double circuit distribution line.

Two new automatic oil circuit re-closers have been installed at the substation which will improve continuity of service and correct temporary faults to cause no more than a flicker. Temporary faults formerly caused outages when fuses were blown and had to be replaced manually.

D. S. Westmoreland, district manager at Warrensburg, stated that the steady electric load growth in the Concordia area since World War II is indicative of the positive efforts achieved by the sound economic development program sponsored by the community leadership.

On Dean's Honor Roll

Gymnastic Negligence Award Made

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP)—A negligence award of $1,215,140 was made Thursday to a young man paralyzed by an injury he suffered doing a gymnastic stunt in his high school.

The award was brough in by a Superior Court jury in favor of the injured youth, Stanley Miller, now 17, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Miller.

Miller, according to testimony, was paralyzed from the neck down by the injury at Chatham Borough High School. He has some use of his arms.

The jury returned a unanimous verdict of negligence against the Chatham Borough Board of Education and a gym instructor, Joseph C. Cloidt.

The accident occurred in the high school gymnasium in January 1962.

The plaintiffs contended that the youth was not properly supervised while performing the gym stunt. The exercise consisted of a leap from a springboard over an obstacle, finishing with a forward tumble.

Young Miller suffered a broken vertebra in the neck and a sheared nerve.

$11½ Million Growth By Farm, Home

A growth of more than $11½ million in total resources for the first half of 1964 was reported by Farm and Home Savings Association in its 140th semi-annual financial statement, released here Friday by the Van Wagner Agency, 111 West Fourth, local representatives.

The firm's assets at the end of June totaled $353,299,733, an increase of $11,626,351 since the last statement issued at the end of 1963.

Other 6-month gains by Farm and Home included:

Savings up $1,691,138 to $294,462,244.

Reserves up $1,171,949 to $25,226,277.

Loans up $9,431,177 to a new total of $298,040,740. More than 57 per cent of Farm and Home's loans are either government-insured (FHA) or government-guaranteed (GI).

Also reported today was another record dividend distribution by Farm and Home. Distributed to more than 90,000 savers were earnings for the first half of 1964 totaling $5,700,598. Since Farm and Home was organized in 1893, its members have received $113,978,257 in dividends. The current distribution represented more than $45,000 for each working day for the past six months.

Besides its office here, Farm and Home maintains its home office in Nevada, Mo., branches in all of the metropolitan centers of Missouri and Texas, and additional offices in 23 other major communities of the two states.

Farm and Home long has been ranked as one of the top twenty savings and loan associations in the nation.

EDITORIALS

The "4th" 101 Years Ago

There may came a day when some local historian will write a chapter about the manner in which Fourths of July were celebrated in Sedalia. The account should be of much interest in telling about the eras when the day was devoted to parades, patriotic speeches, family reunions and noisy fireworks, until the decline thereof started in the decade of 1920.

Nowadays recreational objectives attract people to the parks at home and the lakes miles away.

Quite by accident the other day while viewing microfilm copies of the Sedalia Democrat we ran across an interesting item published July 4, 1904 furnished the newspaper by Major William Beck, a pioneer merchant who came to Pettis county in 1858 and first settled in Priceville, a town site later abandoned, about eight miles east of Sedalia.

For the benefit of the historian and the edification of many Sedalia readers Major Beck's contribution in regard to how the Fourth of July was celebrated in Sedalia in 1863, is herewith reproduced. The object of the celebration was to raise funds for the purpose of erecting a temporary court house in this city:

"By an act of the Missouri legislature the county seat of Pettis county was moved in 1863 from Georgetown to Sedalia, the condition being that Sedalia was to erect a court house.

"Sedalia being small at the time, it was difficult to raise the necessary funds, and it was suggested that a celebration be held on the Fourth of July.

"A Regiment of soldiers was stationed here at the time. We obtained their assistance in arranging the celebration, and hundreds of wagon loads of trees, some of considerable size, were brought from Flat Creek to what is now Broadway street, and a very attractive bower was erected, it being ten feet high and covering ten acres.

"Committees were appointed, and by donations from the city and country a liberal supply of hams, chickens, bread, cakes, etc., was obtained, covering hundreds of feet of tables constructed of rough planks.

"Extra trains were run from Jefferson City and Warrensburg, and an immense crowd, perhaps 5,000 people, gathered under the handsome bower of young trees on Broadway, just where the new Broadway school now stands.

"Speeches were made by General Thomas Price, General George R. Smith and others. The weather was perfect, and from the sale of dinner tickets, at fifty cents each, the sum of $1,500 was realized.

"Wm. E. Bard, Sr., now dead, was custodian of the funds collected, and with this money a frame court house was erected, facing the alley between Main and Second streets, in the rear of the Jno. W. Murphy building, but later it was removed to the court house square."

It is of further interest to note that Major Beck was the grandfather of the following living Sedalians: Mrs. Arline P. Hicks and sister, Miss Marian Phipps, 1607 West 13th street; Mrs. Louise Phipps Collins, 823 West Fifth St.; and Mrs. William P. (Ermine Beck) Hurley, 400 Dal-Whi-Mo. Court.

Do you recall the comment of the child who saw a smear of oil on a mud puddle? With a glint of joy he exclaimed, "Look, there's a rainbow that's bust!" It takes the eye of a child to see like that. Perhaps that's why Jesus talked of believing as a child in order to understand something of the kingdom of heaven.

These days are filled with so many threats of wars, crises, tensions, delinquencies and heartaches, that one can miss the extraordinary in the commonplace. It isn't that one just looks; it is that one sees a new dimension of that which is so easily missed.

Here is John Updike's description of a pathway, explaining his nostalgic pleasure at "the sight of bare earth that has been smoothed and packed firm by the passage of human feet. Such spots abound in small towns: the furtive break in the playground fence dignified into a thoroughfare, the trough of dust underneath each swing, the blurred path worn across a wedge of grass, the anonymous little mound or embankment polished by play and strewn with pebbles like the confetti aftermath of a wedding." Think of seeing all of that when you look at a path!

It is this sheer delight that surprises a generation which looks at things, and sometimes at people, in a possessive sense: How much is it worth?

No wonder we get lost in such problems as race, judging men from our own fears, instead of seeing them as they really are.

From time to time, some famous personage tells of the delight of traveling incognito.

But what of the people whose very worth is incognito, whose excellence is never seen, whose true worth is always missed?

It may take an education, a kind of revolution, in order to see a person for his real worth instead of in terms of an artificial price tag.

There is an inherent worth, but there is also the need to see it. The path IS more than a path when we SEE that it is more than a path. In this world of digits, a man is worth more than the numbers which identify him. So W. H. Auden, remembering Christmas and seeing more than some who looked on, wrote,

"Remembering the stable where for once in our lives
Everything became a You and nothing was an It."

There are complicated political and social problems involved in our dealing with the human problem, but there is this other need to see that nothing is an "it."

Doctors Are Interested In Goldwater

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON—The doctors who run the powerful American Medical Association discussed more politics than medicine at their recent San Francisco convention, and their general diagnosis was that Goldwater would be best for what ails the doctors.

Only a few Pennsylvania physicians spoke up for Gov. William Scranton but their defection from Goldwater was dismissed as a matter of state pride.

Minnesota medics said they would seek a complimentary vote for their fellow physician and favorite son, ex-Congressman Walter Judd, a staunch Republican. Dr. Judd, however, hastened to assure Goldwater that he would have no part of the stop-Goldwater movement.

Judd reached Goldwater by phone from the AMA convention, later looked up Goldwater's man in the AMA, Dr. J. Lafe Ludwig of Los Angeles. Judd left the impression with both — though he never quite said so—that he would switch the Minnesota delegates, now pledged to him, to Goldwater on the first or second ballot.

The leaders of the AMA have been interested in Goldwater ever since he first spoke out against medicare. They formed a committee, called Physicians for Goldwater, to raise money for their hero. No fewer than four former AMA presidents signed up with the committee, which now numbers 23 doctors.

The co-chairmen, Dr. Reuben B. Chrisman, Jr., of Miami and Dr. Ludwig, took a lead in planning AMA's opposition to medicare.

Barry Satisfies

Last March, they attended a Goldwater strategy session at the Mountain Shadows Hotel in Scottsdale, Ariz. Though they had no reason to doubt him, they questioned the senator carefully about his attitude toward medicare.

Once again, he satisfied them what he was dead set against helping the elderly pay their medical bills through Social Security.

Chrisman and Ludwig promptly drafted a letter which they mailed out to AMA members, requesting contributions for Goldwater.

"This medical committee of physicians for Goldwater has been formed," they wrote, "not just because medicare has again become an issue, but because Barry Goldwater has become the center and the symbol of the fight against coercion and unlimited federal power for millions of individuals."

They paid $12,000 to a New Jersey firm to mail their letter to 200,000 practicing physicians, got back over $150,000 in contributions.

Dr. Chrisman followed up with personal "Dear Tom" and "Dear Dick" letters to all the delegates who attended the recent AMA convention. Though most of them had answered the first mailing, they dug into their pockets again and put their money where their hearts were.

Doctors Become Delegates

The physicians for Goldwater have also been encouraging doctors to get themselves appointed as delegates to the Republican convention. Dr. Ludwig ran successfully as a Goldwater delegate in Los Angeles. Dr. Chrisman is barred by a technicality, since he happens to be a registered Democrat, a convenience that permits him to participate more effectively in Florida politics.

An estimated 30 doctors are expected to attend the convention as delegates or alternates. They are already planning to get together July 15 before the balloting begins on the convention floor.

Meanwhile, the AMA's political arm, the American Medical Political Action Committee, is trying to raise $500,000 to pass out to congressmen who will vote against medicare. This is merely the amount that will be channeled through national headquarters; another $2,000,000 is expected to be contributed by doctors directly to their local candidates.

In 1962, this column exposed the manner in which the doctors raised money for the key members of the House ways and means committee who had kept the medicare bill bottled inside the committee. This caused such an adverse public reaction that AMPAC has taken pains this year to camouflage its contributions.

Instead of sending direct contributions, AMPAC routes them through local committees. Already, money from the national organization has gone to Florida, Kentucky, and Texas to be used for anti-medicare candidates in the state primaries.

The doctors are flatly refusing to say who will get their money, leaving it up to the congressional candidates to decide whether to divulge these medical benefits.

All told, the AMA's 200,000 practicing physicians are expected to cough up close to $3,000,000 this year for politics.

Work on 'Suitcase Bomb' Of Hiroshima-Type Force

By RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON — Underground nuclear testing has progressed so rapidly in the United States and Russia that "within a few years" it should be possible to develop a Hiroshima-magnitude nuclear weapon that could be carried in a suitcase.

It now seems likely, in fact, that the suitcase bombs could be made much more powerful than the Hiroshima model. Some scientists speculate in terms of very powerful suitcase bombs indeed.

These bombs could be smuggled into the United States by agents. They could be placed in strategic locations—in or near the Pentagon, the White House, key defense industries, and at strategic locations in big cities such as New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Dallas.

These bombs could be wired with a timer mechanism set to go off in hours, days, weeks or years. Timer techniques are now theoretically so precise that bombs set for 10 years hence would go off within 20 to 30 minutes of the time they were set for.

Or these bombs could be rigged so they could be set to blow on coded signal from ships 2,000 miles away.

Because such suitcase bombs could be planted close to their targets and would not have the inherent inaccuracies of intercontinental ballistic missiles, these small weapons (even Hiroshima magnitude) could do as much damage to key targets as would the much larger Minuteman missiles fired from thousands of miles away.

The development of underground testing in both the United States and the Soviet Union has progressed much faster than even its most ardent advocates would have predicted two years ago.

Reports received by the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency indicate the Russians have an active, well-developed program of underground testing.

If the treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union to ban nuclear testing in the atmosphere (since signed by many nations) was intended to slow the nuclear arms race between the two countries, it has not succeeded.

It now appears that nuclear weapon development in the United States and Russia will push ahead at a more rapid rate than before the treaty was signed.

It is now feasible to test nuclear weapons larger than the Minuteman and Polaris underground. Within the next six years or so it should be possible to test weapons underground that are comparable in size to the Atlas ICBM.

It is possible to interpret mathematically how test results would apply to weapons somewhat larger than are actually tested. If this "extrapolation" is not carried too far, this can be done with a reasonable amount of accuracy.

With this in mind, it is now likely that by 1970 the United States and Russia should be able to run tests that would give relatively accurate information on five and 10-megaton warheads and bombs.

This new rash of testing will mean much more effective ICBMs and tactical battlefield nuclear weapons.

It could mean, for example, that a Minuteman ICBM containing the same amount of fissionable nuclear material as today's weapons would have twice, three times or even five times the bang.

Theoretically, the Minuteman's power could be multiplied 1,000 times. But practically, that's not around the corner.

We the Women

Brainy? Then Don't Brag

by Ruth Millet,
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

"I was always proud of how well I got along with the men with whom I worked," writes a career woman. "I thought it was a lot of nonsense about men resenting women in business.

"But after a few years I realized I wasn't on as good terms with them as I had once been, and I tried to figure out why.

"It finally dawned on me that in the beginning I didn't strive to impress a man with how smart I was. But gradually, as I took on more responsibility, I became eager to have men respect my brains.

"In trying to make them respect my mind I forgot it was even more important to show them how much I respected their opinions and ideas. Since then, I've noticed a lot of other career women making the same mistake. Maybe you could show them how wrong they are."

There doesn't need to be much added to that letter. The writer has made her own point.

Once a woman gets to thinking she has a pretty good mind and wants to be sure every man she meets recognizes the fact, she is well on the way to losing her femininity. She is repelling rather than attracting the men she works with and the men she meets socially.

Men don't really want to admire a woman's brains. If forced to acknowledge that a woman has a goodly supply of them, they'll do so — reluctantly.

That's why it is such a poor idea for a woman to force a man to acknowledge how smart she is.

Be pleasant and charming. The clue is to let a man realize, himself, how capable you are. He'll be so smug about his discovery that he won't resent you at all.

Early Morning

The morning is so very fresh and bright
With everything so wide awake but me
And the day lilies with their buds still tight,
"Too early," so they say — and I agree;
The grass, that should be cut, is very green
And drops of water on it sparkle, too,
That at a distance looks like satin sheen,
I wonder if they're from the rain or dew;
A silken network spread from plant to plant
Moves with the breeze and twinkles in the sun,
Along the walk crawls slowly one lone ant
As if reluctant that a new day has begun;
A robin hops with swiftness on the ground
Then lifts himself lightly to a tree
Where saucily he looks all round
As if he's trying to see what he can see—
From far away another bird's song rings,
He tilts his head a bit, as if to hear,
And suddenly he lustily begins to sing
As if to waken all the sleeping near;
The cultured flowers mingle with the wild
Where in my garden scattered seeds have grown,
The wind and birds my garden have compiled
Flowers in the natural state with those I've sown;
This is the morning of a summer day
In all its glory at an early hour
When everything is like a grand display —
A sunny morning after a night shower.

Democrat Pick-ups

ONE DAY a very young woman was keeping a six-year-old girl for the afternoon for a friend.

"How old are you?" the little girl asked.

"Twenty-three," the young woman replied.

"Twenty-three," repeated the child, "that's not very old. How come you've got such a young face and such old hands?"

The hands and face, as far as the youngster was concerned, didn't go together. And she did not know whether to judge her age by the hands or the face. She was so curious she asked, and then she wondered how she happened to have hands she thought looked too old for that age. — H. L.

Polly's Pointers®

Grandma Baby Sitter

by Polly Cramer,
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DEAR POLLY — If you print this, all your young mothers will probably think I am a mean old woman. Really, I am not — just a desperate one.

I have s-e-v-e-n grandchildren and only two are old enough to go to school. Until a year ago the children were brought to my home when their parents needed a baby sitter. When the parents picked them up, I was left with towels, napkins and bedding to wash and windows, woodwork cabinet doors and floors to clean. If they did not bring enough clothes I washed and ironed while I baby sat. I also laundered diapers for those unhousebroken little ones.

Finally, I hit upon a solution. Now I never baby sit in my own home. If Susan is going to her bridge club, I go to her house to take care of the children. Susan hesitates a little before asking me to drive 25 miles for an afternoon, but she never hesitated to bring her two children here.

Helen thinks a bit before asking me to spend three weeks in her home just after Ruth has had me spend two weeks with her while she vacationed in Hawaii. They never overlap as they frequently did when the children stayed with me. Then I often had six children at once.

Grandma has a big house, she loves her grandchildren, she is only 70 — so what do six children matter? Now when they come back from this place or that, they do not pick up clean children and then go home to a clean house. They come home to a reasonably clean house for, after all, being a baby sitter is a busy job. I keep the clothes washed but I do not iron. I do not scrub floors or polish windows.

If dishes or furniture get broken, they are not my dishes nor my furniture. In other words, they do not get all this and heaven, too, when I baby sit in their own homes. Grandmothers, take heed. — A.B.C.

GIRLS — Some of you may take exception to A.B.C.'s letter but I say "Hurrah" for her. As we grow older our strength and energy are not what they were 20 or more years before when our own children were little. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Instead of using a bath mat for bath or shower, try using a few sheets of paper toweling. It will absorb the water and can then be used to wipe out the tub and soap dish and is completely disposable. This is a good idea when traveling.—MARIAN.

DEAR POLLY — Before moving day arrives, have ready a large handbag or shopping bag, with strong handles, to hold the following articles — several hand towels and wash cloths, a cake of soap, box of detergent, some cleaning rags, facial and bathroom tissue, several light bulbs, a box of safety matches, flashlight, hammer, screw driver and old newspapers. Other things could be added but the articles mentioned are a MUST. Grab the handles, put the bag in the family car and be on your way. — HAZEL

GIRLS — One addition to this handy bag should be a can of cleanser for the bathroom and the kitchen sink which usually need scrubbing even in a brand new house. Do you remember a previous moving day hint where our reader suggested a separate marked carton of linens for the beds and bathroom that could be easily found for use the first night in a new home? I latched on to it for a recent move and it does save a lot of hunting.— POLLY

Feminine Revolution Along the Equator

MOORE: Wanted: The right to be a human being.

TRAUB: Liberian editor, Mrs. Margaret Traub works in her office with U.S. Department of Agriculture adviser.

POLICEWOMAN: Liberian women also direct the traffic.

By PATRICIA CHAPMAN

MONROVIA, Liberia—(NEA)—On a brown, parched field in the outskirts of this capital city President William Tubman's imposing executive mansion stands like a misplaced World's Fair pavilion.

Practically in the front yard of Tubman's residence the shell of an old Volkswagen sedan provides a rusty trellis for tough brambles. And with these divergent signs of modern Africa as a backdrop, a Liberian "mammy trader," her children around her feet, peddles her wares to passers-by.

Standing beneath the hot Liberian sun, counting profits in pennies a day, women such as she typify the old society, the old way of making ends meet in black Africa.

But there are indications here in West Africa that the old society is passing. With political liberation, the women of the continent are carving out their liberation from the social ties that have held them down for centuries.

It is likely that the campaign of Margaret Chase Smith for president of the United States made more of an impact here than anywhere in the world — with the possible exception of Skowhegan, Me.

Mention Mrs. Smith and eyes light up, heads nod.

She's the woman running for president. That fact alone guarantees her support from the fiercely feministis new breed of women in the developoping countries.

Women's suffrage is still in its infancy. Liberian women have voted only since 1947. And in some areas such as Muslim Northern Nigeria women still cannot vote. Yet, in other more advanced areas women hold top elective posts in government.

Few girls get beyond the sixth grade in school — if they go to school at all. Yet, women are doctors, lawyers, merchants and even tribal chiefs. They are also shoemakers and teachers, police, cab drivers, goldsmiths and butchers.

The feminine revolution creates conflict among the women themselves — the child brides of the bush versus a growing urban group of working women.

Out in the bush, the boy still makes "love eyes," teenagers "play in the moonlight" and if boy can meet bride price, he gets the girl.

Yet, new customs are replacing the fashion of the jungle. A woman senator in Nigeria recently upbraided the girls "who tend to lower the moral standard of this country by putting on very short and open dresses and going about almost naked. It is not in our custom that we should go about naked. By checking all acts of immorality on the part of our girls we shall be building our nation in a correct and decent way."

Thus the revolution continues with a venegance. Monrovia's Elizabeth Collins, village born and fiftyish, is typical of its leaders. She is a grandmother and Liberia's first lady senator.

The Senate's "Lone Star" (as she names herself) is no newcomer to the feminist crusade. A daughter of the bush, she was born into it.

"My mother whipped me every step to the mission schoolhouse and was ridiculed. I was one of two girls in our high school and earned a scholarship to college in the States.

"I have a dozen children," she says. "Here, a big family is a blessing. A mother says she has a dozen children if she has but one."

A teacher by profession, Mrs. Collins founded and still directs People's College, a night school for adults in Monrovia.

Campaigning last year against five men, her drive carried her over 450 miles from village to village, hut to hut, most of it on foot. She started out with five campaign managers but tired them all out. The result: a landslide.

No less vocal on the subject of women's rights are the women of Nigeria. They have enjoyed the franchise a shorter time than their Liberian counterparts. However, they already have made it to positions of power in government and professions.

Of a population of some 600,000 in Lagos, the capital city, less than 1,000 women hold college or nursing degrees. But the picture is changing rapidly.

Lagos already has two nursery schools to care for the children of working mothers.

The past year has also seen the founding of the city's first business and professional women's club, the Soroptimists. Thanks to the efforts of its president and founder, Mrs. Aduke Moore, 43-year-old attorney and director of public relations for Mobil Oil in Lagos, membership has spiralled from eight to forty.

Mrs. Moore considers herself emancipated. The British-educated daughter of a prominent Lagos attorney, she is also one 7-5 by Patricia Chapman — of Nigeria's first two women delegates to the United Nations.

"What I want is new in this country, the right for a woman to be a human being," she says.

For Mrs. Moore, this means equal job opportunities, equal education, protection of the wife's community property rights — in short, full equality in the eyes of the law.

Mrs. Afi Ekong is just 33. Reared in Northern Nigeria, the Muslim part of the country where women have few rights, she was educated in England. After her marriage, she became a painter, against family protests.

She owns the Gallery Labac in Lagos, a government sponsored showcase for contemporary Nigerian art.

Another example of a West African woman who made good is Mrs. Ella Koblo-Gulama, a diplomat of Sierra Leone. She is currently in the United States in her capacity of minister without portfolio. She is supervising one of that nation's most important exports, the Royal National Dance Troupe, appearing at the World's Fair.

Although "nice girls" still do not go on stage, they are musicians, writers, and television personalities.

In Monrovia, the publishing business has attracted Mrs. Margaret Traub, a former teacher who holds a journalism degree from the University of Syracuse, N. Y. She is the editor of "New Day," a children's grade school publication.

And, says Nancy Nah, mother of six and director of Liberia's home economics extension service, "We are working because there is no choice. The government needs every trained hand. You can't refuse."

OLD AND THE NEW: "Mammy trader" sells her wares by the Liberian presidential palace.

Changing Color Uniforms Under Army Research

WASHINGTON (AP) — Battle dress worn by American soldiers may one day change color and blend into the natural background—much like a chameleon taking on protective coloration.

Officials said today that Army and industry scientists have been doing serious research in this direction, although a workable system may be a long way off.

If the research pays off, soldiers fighting in the jungle would be hard to spot because their uniforms would turn green. This would be particularly valuable in areas like Viet Nam.

In the desert, battle dress might change to sand color and in the Arctic it might become white.

The research centers on a hunt for dyes that will change color in response to light.

Many Lives Of Arlene Francis

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Arlene Francis is a relaxed woman whose disciplined strength and energy permit her to lead simultaneously almost as many lives as the proverbial cat.

Miss Francis appears weekly on CBS' perennial Sunday night panel show, "What's My Line?" She conducts a daily radio interview show on New York station WOR, fills weekly spots on NBC-Radio's "Monitor" and until recently was moderator of a weekly discussion program on a radio network. She has filled in, at times, for Dave Garroway, Jack Paar and Bill Cullen on their television programs.

She manages two homes—an apartment in mid-town Manhattan and a country place in Westchester County. She is the wife of successful actor Martin Gabel, and they have a son, Peter, 17, who will enter Harvard as a freshman next year. She is a fine hostess and much in demand as a guest.

She flies out to Hollywood or Europe occasionally to take a part in a film; to Miami in August to be hostess at the finals of the "Miss Universe" beauty contest which CBS will televise.

She'll spend more than a month this summer starring in a summer theater production of "Kind Sir," playing points as far west as Denver and as far east as Holyoke, Mass., and Westport, Conn.

She has had handsome rewards for this wide variety of activities over the years—including a recent honorary doctorate of humanities from American International College in Springfield, Mass.

Miss Francis is an important star, and a well-loved one. But somewhere, she feels, she got off on the wrong road.

"I started out with one goal," she said. "I wanted to be a serious actress. I think that the happiest five weeks of my professional career were last spring when I took over the Broadway lead of 'Chin Chin.'"

Arlene strolled into show business through the front gate. Daughter of a well-known portrait photographer, Aram Kazanjian, an Armenian, and a mother of English-German descent, Arlene Francis Kazanjian was born in Boston, grew up in New York, where she went to the right private schools and somewhere picked up a determination to become an actress.

The family—particularly her father—disapproved of the theater, but relented when she wanted to audition for a radio part. She got the part and went bouncing off into a successful career in the day-time dramatic series.

"Radio came easily," she recalls. "It wasn't exactly what I wanted, but it was a crutch that paid well—and I never stopped working. And because it was successful, somehow I never could turn around and go back to take the other road."

Television came along just as easily. As one of the first panelists on "What's my Line?" she was a great hit with her quick wit, infectious laugh, smart clothes and hairdos. She has starred in other television shows—but appeared rarely as an actress.

She will drop anything when a good part in the theater comes along. She has appeared in 21 plays, starting with "Doughgirls," a comedy hit in which she played a Russian sniper, complete with accent.

This might seem like a strange time to play a violin concerto, but then again Peter Sellers is known to do strange things. The rather puzzled lovely lady is Capucine, and they both appear in the delightful comedy, "The Pink Panther," which will open today at the Fox Theatre. The Mirisch Company presentation of Blake Edwards' Technicolor-Technirama picture is being released through United Artists.

Romig Reunion Is Attended By 74 Persons

The annual Romig reunion was held June 28 at Liberty Park with 74 persons in attendance.

Francis Romig was elected president at the business meeting. Other officers will be Mrs. Sadie Romig, vice president and Mary Margaret Woolery secretary-treasurer.

A donation of $5 was made to the Heart Fund in memory of Carl Romig.

Present were: Mr. and Mrs. Harold Romig, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Romig and David, Mrs. Letha Romig, Donnie and Gary, Tommie and Frankie Watring, Otterville;

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Kemp, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie May, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fichter, Mrs. Frank Van Natta, Diane and Terry, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Romig, Mrs. Sadie Romig, of Route 3, Sedalia; Mr. and Mrs. Freddie Moon, Monte, Gary, Dale and Larry, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Colaflower, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Morris and Rickey, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Romig and Phyllis Anna, Louise Burlingame, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Romig, Sedalia; Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Romig, Belton;

Mrs. Ernie Woolery, Keith and Kevin, Cheryl Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. George Romig, Tommy, Lenny, Vincent, Gina, Rodney and Timothy, Syracuse; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Romig and family, Fortuna; Mr. and Mrs. Jess Romig, Smithton.

Mrs. Blanche Tune, St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Hodges, Mike and Dennis, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Romig, Anna, Robert and Linda, Kansas City; Mr. and Mrs. Wenell Linneman, Sarah, Susan, Alacia, Lowell and Leland, Keytesville.

The next reunion will be July 4, 1965 at Liberty Park.

Sidewalk Bazaar Schedule All Day July 27

The Sidewalk Bazaar, which is always a big event in Sedalia and which people of the area look forward to, will be held Monday, July 27, and, according to the retail merchants division of the Chamber of Commerce, of which C. J. Chapman, is director, will be the one day only, but will continue through to 8:30 p.m.

Since this is a time of fun as well as bargains, the merchants felt that an opportunity should be given those who cannot take advantage of the festival of bargains during the day to do so during the evening hours.

Organizations and church groups are invited to participate and are asked to obtain the space for their booths from the merchants. The Chamber, however, is seeking information from these groups on their locations and what they plan to sell. A call to the Chamber office, TA 6-2222, giving this information, will be appreciated.

The retail merchants urge everyone to fly their flags on July 4 as well as on the day of the Street Bazaar. The Business and Professional Women's Club have flags to sell as well as the brackets for the posts for those who would like to have flags.

With Stopover In Hawaii

New Zealand, Australian Vacation for Mrs. Kuhlman

Mrs. Irene D. Kuhlman, Sedalia, has given an interesting account of her recent trip to the Automobile Club of Missouri, World Wide Travel Department, during June, which took her to New Zealand, Australia and Hawaii.

Enroute, Mrs. Kuhlman said, there was a refueling stop at Nandi in Fiji Islands.

The little island of Nandi in the South Pacific, she continued, is one of the Fiji Islands, one of the largest of the group of 322 owned by the British. The air terminal is very modern in design and furnishings, and provides a shop where gifts, stamps and drinks may be purchased. The Fiji natives own the land, but Indians mostly operate the shops and businesses. Education extends through high school and sugar cane is the main industry.

Her next stop was Auckland, New Zealand, an industrial center and the largest city in that country. It is an overseas air and sea terminal and one of the finest yatching harbors in the world.

Before being settled by the English the land was owned by the Maori natives and trust funds were set up for the Maori land owners. Former land owners are paid regularly, and some Maori depend on this source of livelihood for existence, others who were not land owners work along side of other Auckland workers. The Maori have four representatives in the House of Parliament.

Although there are many volcano mountains in this country, none are active, but there is much underground thermal activity some of which is presently used to generate steam for power. This process, Mrs. Kuhlman stated, they believe may hold some great possibilities for future business growth. Some oil has been found but not in large quantities.

The native bird, the Kiwi, is without wings, and for its size lays the largest egg of any bird. Prices are a bit higher than in the United States.

To the average American visiting New Zealand for the first time, Mrs. Kuhlman said, the tea habit is vividly impressed. The tea service, if possible and practical, is of silver with a tree-tiered silver tray of small sandwiches and fancy tea cakes brought to the table along with the tea service.

The Church of England is the predominant religion of the country, but many people, she said, may be seen going to and from the Catholic churches, even more than in the United States as there seem to be more day time services. Other religions are practiced without restraint.

The capital of New Zealand is Wellington situated on Cook Strait which at certain gale times has the roughest waters in the world. The people are sea-minded, she said, and there are many sea-side resorts along the north coast of the town. Besides the abundance of small sail boats along the resort coast, the straight itself receives many large ocean liners, cargo ships and commuting crafts, many of the latter carrying about a thousand passengers along with their cars.

The cars are carried to an upper deck by derrick, Mrs. Kuhlman said, but in the near future will be modernized at Australian shipyards to contain roll-on car space so the cars may be rolled on and not lifted.

Christchurch is on the South Island, and is called the Cathedral City, Garden City, City of Trees, and the Most English City outside of England. It was planned as a transplanted section of the mother land. Near the center is a statue of Captain Robert Falcon Scott which represents a close link between New Zealand and the vast white continent 2,000 miles to the south, Antarctica. Scott left from Lyttleton on his final voyage to Antarctica from which he never returned. Now a little more than 50 years later, the city is the base for Operation Deep Freeze, the permanent United States Antarctic expedition. Ships leave Lyttleton for the big American base at McMurdo Sound. The city's international airport is the only airport in the world that has a special departure and arrival for Antarctic travel.

The Canterbury Museum gives the history of Maori and the culture of the tribe. Effectively, too, Mrs. Kuhlman said, modern pictorial displays tell the story of New Zealand.

Australia is a lively, progressive, modern country with practically unlimited possibilities, she said, and the greatest asset in the country is that in 1962 the population of 11 million could be raised to 60 million without lowering living standards.

The standards of living, Mrs. Kuhlman observed, are high, with high employment figures, a 40 hour week with overtime for overage, annual leave, 355 trade unions, and 70 per cent of the homes occupied by owners or those buying them on installments. Commonwealth benefits for hospital care is in common usage and a wide range of drugs and medicines prescribed by a doctor is supplied for a fee of five shillings (approximately 55 cents) for each prescription. There are over 800 public hospitals in Australia administered generally by local boards or directly by the state and financed in part by government subsidies. Age, invalid and widows' pensions are subject to residence qualifications and British nationality.

More than a third of the country is tropics. However, as a whole, the climate is more temperate than other countries in corresponding latitudes. It has always been a leading agricultural county and its products contribute a great deal to the food and clothing supplies of many countries.

Australia uses English coinage, Mrs. Kuhlman said, but values vary slightly from New Zealand. However, in 1967, both Australia and New Zealand are changing to the metric system which will probably make conversion much easier for visitors from the United States.

Hawaii, the 50th state, Mrs. Kuhlman said, is Oh, Go and Grow. Its main sources of income, sugar, pineapple and tourists, seem to be on an upward swing. There are new office buildings, new apartments and new houses, and a new trend in the apartment buildings is that individual living sections are sold. The average living quarters in one of these new cooperatives with one bedroom accommodations could run $19,000 and upward if more space is acquired.

The water supply of Honolulu is one of which residents are particularly proud, she found. No chlorine has to be added and the water itself has a good taste as it is derived exclusively from rainfall stored high on the hills in reservoirs and piped into the city in concrete lined pipes.

The climate she decided was just about what we might imagine paradise to be.

Famed Flyer Still Putts Along at 55

RENO, Nev. (AP) — George Schuster doesn't drive anymore because, at 91, his eyes aren't so sharp. But Schuster grinned and gripped the wheel firmly as he steered the old Thomas Flyer on a little spin down a back road near Reno recently.

"It runs perfect," Schuster beamed later. "It still will go 55 miles an hour."

The Flyer, with 35-year-old Schuster at the helm, rolled into Paris July 30 that year after a punishing 13,000-mile trip to win the New York-Paris auto race sponsored by the New York Times and the Paris Matin.

Schuster chuckles as he recalls shoveling through snowdrifts across the United States, hitchhiking a steamer ride to Alaska and back, chugging past amazed Japanese and searching for a new transmission somewhere in Russia.

Schuster was a test driver for the Thomas company of Buffalo, N.Y., in 1908 when he chanced to chat with Montague Roberts, a Thomas official in New York City.

"He asked me if I would go on the New York-Paris car with him as mechanic."

They left New York City on Feb. 12.

Roberts left the Thomas in Cheyenne, Wyo., to meet racing commitments in the East. Linn Mathewson, the Thomas dealer in Denver, Colo., took the wheel. Schuster became driver and team captain in San Francisco. He's the only survivor of the team.

The designated route was by steamship to Valdez, Alaska, for an ice crossing ot the Bering Strait to Siberia. That's why the race started in winter. But the route was changed to a sea crossing to Japan.

Schuster and his crew of two drove through Japan, crossed to Vladivostok, and headed out across Russia May 22.

The transmission finally gave out in Russia. Schuster tracked down one sent to him the other way around the world from Buffalo.

The German Protos auto piloted by Lt. Hans Koeppen, only one of the other five cars which started, pulled into Paris five days ahead of Schuster. The Thomas was declared the winner on the basis of elapsed time.

The battered old auto looked as if it was only a step away from the junkyard, Schuster says, until Bill Harrah, Reno auto collector, bought the Flyer last summer.

Schuster came to Reno. Patchwork repairs Schuster made on the trip had been replaced and reinforced, apparently at the Thomas factory before the car was used as the pathfinder for a New York-Seattle race.

Penasse, Minn., was the northernmost town in the U.S. before Alaska became a state.

Bethel Gets That Chance

By JOAN CROSBY

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The last television season was a memorable one for lively, pretty and talented Bethel Leslie.

She appeared in 22 of 25 episodes of "The Richard Boone Show" and wound up with: an Emmy nomination as best actress, five false noses and one pair of mink eyelashes.

During the season Bethel played everything from a seductive ax murderess to a dumb gangster's moll, to an irish scrub woman, through a whole series of witchy mothers.

"One part — that of a Mexican — was cut from one show. I think my favorite character was the Irish scrub woman. I looked like a frozen robin in the make-up."

When Bethel was cast as the gangster's moll, she wanted to play the part as an Italian with a Roman nose. "But I was told I couldn't wear a Roman nose because I wrinkle my forehead when I talk. Then the character was switched to a Judy Holliday type, and I wore an upturned nose. After five different noses through the season, I switched to mink eyelashes. I also had lots of wrinkles added from time to time.

"But what was really depressing was playing Laura Devon's mother with no makeup at all. I was soothed over that by being told 'This is 1964, and mothers don't look old, tired and wrinkled.'"

Right after the Boone show closed production, Bethel was offered a script for "The Fugitive."

"I only read as far as the description of the character I was to play. It said she was wearing Capri pants one size too small. I said 'I'll take it.' When you're Bethel Leslie and stuck playing Bethel Leslie parts, you can have great fun in a role like that. Besides, I'm tired of being told I'm not sexy."

BETHEL: She fell into acting.

Bethel was born in New York City, the daughter of a lawyer and a newspaperwoman. But she says she always wanted to act.

"I announced very early that I was going to be an actress, but I don't know if I would have had the guts to follow through if I hadn't fallen into it."

She fell in by jumping in a swimming pool. A friend of her brother's, then a Yale student, had done some acting, so a plot was arranged whereby producer-director George Abbott, a family friend, would weekkend at Southhampton with the family, and meet the would-be Thespian. But it was 13-year-old Bethel, busy swimming the length of the pool, who caught his eye.

"I was offered a part in the road company of 'Kiss and Tell.' But I had finally made two friends in school (I was most unpopular in school), and I didn't want to leave them. Then Mr. Abbott said he was doing a Broadway show and there was a part in that for me. That way I could act and keep my friends."

Bethel is totally lacking in actor's ego, perhaps because her family has never been too impressed with her work. "I played Portia in 'The Merchant of Venice' in school and I asked my brother, after one performance, if I was good. He said 'I don't know. I couldn't hear you.' And he was sitting in the first row.

"Another time after a performance I asked my father if I was all right. He said, 'Well, you were still on your feet when the curtain came down.'"

Social Life Curtailed By Weekly Show

EDITOR'S NOTE—Inger Stevens, pretty, witty and star of her own ABC television series, explains here in detail why the life of a popular star isn't all glamor—that in fact it is largely plain hard work and long hours.

By INGER STEVENS
For Vacationing Cynthia Lowry

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — As a bachelor girl, I'm frequently asked how starring in a weekly television series affects my social life.

The answer is simple. During the work week, there isn't any. Besides, my schedule is so impossible I can't imagine any man putting up with it.

The alarm clock sounds at 5:15 a.m. and homecoming is usually around 8:30 in the evening. There is only time to remove makeup, eat and study the next day's 13 pages of dialogue before 9:45 bedtime.

About the only exception to this rigid routine is that I do attend premieres and openings — because it is part of the job. But if I get home late, it always affects my work the next day. Even after completing 42 shows, I hate to be late and can't relax if I don't know my lines.

Is it worth it?

Frankly, it is no hardship. After being with people all day I enjoy getting home and taking it easy. On the weekend I make up for it and enjoy life with a lot of friends, mainly from outside the business. A favorite Saturday recreation is going to the races.

When "The Farmer's Daughter" started last season I had no idea how time-consuming it would prove. Sometimes I feel as if my life were being churned down hte garbage disposal. That first season was particularly difficult because so many weekends had to be devoted to promotion trips. I have never talked so much about myself ever.

Working in a series is plain hard work, particularly when it involves appearing in nearly every scene. It's also a weighty responsibility when you look around at all the people working on the set and are aware that they and their families are dependent on the success of the series.

"Ja," as Katy would say, I like life as "The Farmer's Daughter."

Three-Vehicle Crash Kills Fort Worth Man

MARSHFIELD, Mo. (AP)—A three-vehicle accident took the life of Henry Armfield, 72, of Fort Worth, Tex., Thursday.

Armfield's car, bumped from the rear by another car, veered into a parked truck and was wedged under it on U. S. 66 near Marshfield.

Cursing of Golfers Bothers Neighbors

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP)—Golfers' cursing has caused residents of homes overlooking the Salisbury Park course in nearby East Meadow to tee off against plans for night golfing.

"It will extend the cursing hours," wrote 40 residents in a letter to Nassau County Executive Eugene H. Nickerson. They protested the planned installation of lights on the course.

The letter was written by Gerald Ball, who said Thursday that the "homes put up with the golfers and their choice language all day long, and we feel that comes evening, we are due a little tranquility."

SHARE OF SPACE — Hundreds of small investors are scrambling to buy shares in the Communications Satellite Corp., one of the most glamorous stock issues in Wall Street history. Bank employe Joanne Cockrill shows a certificate with an experimental relay satellite in the background. The corporation hopes to place a network of satellites in space. A unique corporation, half of the stock is the property of the U.S. government.

Special Introductory Offer . . .

U.S. Royal has developed a tire construction that is so strong, we can make this unheard of offer—IF THE TIRE FAILS FOR ANY REASON, EXCEPT FOR A REPAIRABLE PUNCTURE OR DELIBERATE ABUSE, AS LONG AS THERE IS STILL 1/16" OF ORIGINAL TREAD LEFT

U. S. ROYAL WILL GIVE YOU A BRAND NEW TIRE FREE

Do not confuse this offer with the usual "partial allowance" toward a new tire, based on remaining tread.

This offer covers:
The U.S. Royal first-line tire
(Safety 800)
The tiger's paw
(Red-circle Super Safety 800)
The U.S. Royal premium tire
(Red-circle Royal Master)

Road hazards are included in the offer.
No time limit. No mileage limit.

Offer applies to passenger car replacement tires purchased and registered between now and August 15th.

Fair enough?

KEVIN the BOLD

KREIGH COLLINS

IMPATIENT FOR WORD OF HIS BETROTHED, WHO MONTHS AGO SAILED FOR HISPANIOLA, DIEGO MORENO ASKS--

I HEAR YOU HAVE NEWS OF MY FIANCEE, ESTRELLA MARIA NUNEZ. YOU WERE ABOARD HER SHIP?

ABOARD ANOTHER SHIP, YOUR HONOR. DO YOU RECOGNIZE THIS RING?

T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

IT BELONGS TO ESTRELLA'S DUENNA. HOW DID IT GET IN YOUR HANDS?

THE DUENNA WE PLUCKED FROM THE SEA. BEFORE SHE DIED SHE BADE ME TELL YOU THE NUNEZ SHIP WAS WRECKED.

SI, IT WAS DESTROYED NEAR THE WINDWARD ISLANDS--WITH NO SURVIVORS.

NO! NO! I'LL NOT BELIEVE IT! THE AUTHORITIES MUST LAUNCH AN EXPEDITION!

DAYS, WEEKS, MONTHS BRING NO RESULTS.

BUT SPAIN CANNOT BRING BACK THE DEAD! THE NUNEZ SHIP TO HAITI WAS LOST WITH ALL HANDS!

THEN I WILL GO MYSELF --IF I HAVE TO SWIM!

I WOULD BUY PASSAGE ON YONDER SHIP. DO YOU KNOW WHO COMMANDS IT?

CAPTAIN MADERAS, SENOR, BUT HE DOES NOT TAKE PASSENGERS.

SOME MEN WILL DO ANYTHING FOR MONEY?

SOME MIGHT... WHAT HAVE YOU IN MIND?

THAT SHIP BOUND FOR HISPANIOLA, 'TWILL TAKE NO PASSENGERS...

AND YOU WANT TO BE SMUGGLED ABOARD? GIVE ME YOUR GOLD!

MEANWHILE, IN LONDON...

WHAT ARE YOU DOING KEVIN?

LEARNING THE RECORDER, BRETT. THESE ARE THE PIPING TIMES OF PEACE!

WHAT ARE YOU DOING?

POLISHING YOUR SWORD. WHEN LAST YOU TALKED THAT WAY IT CAME IN HANDY!

VERY WELL, MARTHA, I'LL BE GLAD TO SAMPLE YOUR CAKE AND GIVE YOU MY OPINION!

ZZ-- SNAW!

T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

AWK-- SLURP!

I WARN YOU JACKALS -- BEWARE OF PROVOKING THE WRATH OF A HOOPLE!

HAW HAW

WE WERE JUST TRYING TO PEP YOU UP, MAJOR!

YEAH, YOU CAN'T EXPECT TO GO THROUGH LIFE WITH LESS FLAME THAN A WET MATCH!

EGAD, FOR YOUR INFORMATION, YOU ARE TALKING TO THE MAN WHO BUILT THE FIRST BRIDGE ACROSS THE AMAZON! A WET MATCH INDEED!

I'M GLAD TO HEAR I MARRIED A CIVIL ENGINEER! I'VE JUST BOUGHT SOME NEW DRAPES AND I WANT YOU TO PUT UP THE RODS -- NOW!

BUT, MARTHA, MY LOVE -- OH, WHAT'S THE USE! DRAT!

HOW'S IT COMING, MAJOR? LOOKS LIKE YOU TALKED YOURSELF INTO A JOB!

FAW! MERE CHILD'S PLAY FOR A MAN WHO -- AWK!

JERRY LEWIS— He Gets Better with Defeat

If Father Flanagan Were Alive Today

If Father Flanagan Were Alive

The founder of Boys Town believed, "There is no such thing as a bad boy." But would he still feel that way if he saw today's kids? Here's the answer of the beloved priest's successor

By Father NICHOLAS H. WEGNER
Director of Boys Town, Neb. as told to Will Oursler*

Father Wegner

Father Flanagan

This handsome house is home for some of Boys Town's citizens.

*Author of "Father Flanagan of Boys Town" (with Fulton Oursler)

SONG YONG CHO was a 12-year-old Korean shoeshine boy who lost both legs during the Korean War. He was a familiar sight in the Pusan railroad station, dragging himself from one customer to the next.

But he was always smiling. The GIs nicknamed him Chi Si—Smiling Boy.

They began teaching him to speak American and telling him about the United States, especially a place called Boys Town, near Omaha, Neb.—a tremendous 1,500-acre home and school that took in homeless boys.

"Maybe they'll take you in, Chi Si," Sgt. Harold Douglas of Mississippi told him. "You could use a home."

At Boys Town we began to receive letters from these servicemen, telling us about Song. A solution had to be found, so all of us pitched in. We had special legislation passed in Congress to permit Song to come to Boys Town. In Korea, the U.S. Army fitted him with artificial legs. For the first time, he could walk as tall as any other kid. Transportation was arranged via the armed forces, and Song came to Boys Town.

His limited knowledge of English was no more a handicap than his artificial legs. He played baseball and football. He did well in class, became an Eagle Scout, and even earned a merit badge for lifesaving—stripping off clothes and artificial limbs and swimming to a "victim" in less than 60 seconds.

Song was graduated as a Boys Town citizen and went on to become a U.S. citizen. He also went to business school. Currently, he has a good start on a business career in Kansas City, Mo.

To me, Song is a symbol. The problems and crises we face change; they now reach out across a violence-ridden globe. But they are in essence the same old problems and crises with the same underlying causes: bad environment, neglect, abuse, abandonment.

And the cure of love, understanding, and concern also remains unchanged.

Many people question whether it is possible today to cling to the concepts and techniques of Father Flanagan, the beloved founder of Boys Town and my predecessor as director. There are those who say: "Youth is different now. You have youngsters who are ruthless criminals. You have to treat them for what they are—hardened, vicious killers."

Faced with the fact that we can take only 350 new boys a year out of 3,500 applicants, do we still take the delinquent as Father Flanagan did when Boys Town first opened its doors in 1917?

Of course we do! Delinquents have always been only a small percentage of our boys; primarily, Boys Town is a home for the homeless. But we still take boys in serious trouble, even murderers, if we are convinced after full investigation that the root of the boy's trouble is homelessness, neglect, mistreatment rather than any basic emotional or psychological disorder.

Do we still believe in the saying Father Flanagan made famous years ago: "There is no such thing as a bad boy"? Sometimes I say it a little differently: No boy really wants to be bad; many simply don't know the difference.

Petey is one of our boys out of a gang in a big Eastern city. He was picked up following a "rumble" with another gang.

Petey looked as tough as any of the gang. But investigation showed him to be only a boy with no home, no parents (they had walked out on him). The gang was his only family. Their basement "hideout" was actually his home.

PETEY WAS THE KIND of youngster some might say understood only the language of violence. But he came to us because a caseworker had enough heart to talk with Petey, to draw him out, to discover how desperately he wanted and needed someone to care about him.

This one-time boy "hood" has become one of our top honor students.

Unfortunately, boys with nowhere to go, no one to care are in greater number today than ever before. They come to us from courts, social agencies, parents, priests, ministers, relatives, and neighbors who see a kid alone in a house or apartment and wonder how he lives. Many also come unannounced off the highway, as they have throughout the years since Father Flanagan first founded his home for boys on Dodge Street, Omaha, on a borrowed $90.

Today

In the shadows of the late afternoon in the foyer of the Administration Building, a boy sits waiting. Staff workers have gone home. But someone finds him, and a dean and I talk with this 14-year-old youngster who says his name is Bob.

Uncertain, speaking in halting words, Bob tells us his story. He has come a long way—from a mining town in Pennsylvania. "My mother told me to come because I wanted to go to high school. She gave me money for the bus. She said you would take me in."

He told us his father had been killed in a mine disaster. His mother married a second time, but his stepfather had been permanently disabled in the mines.

"There isn't any high school in my town and none close enough to go to. We don't have any money, but Mom scraped up enough for my bus fare."

HE LOOKS UP with a question in his eyes. We tell him that first of all he'll have a good dinner and a night's rest. Tomorrow we'll talk about his becoming a citizen of Boys Town.

Despite pressure of numbers and limited space, every boy is treated individually. Each story is checked. Sometimes the facts don't stand up; perhaps the boy has had a quarrel at home and merely ran away. But in the case of Bob, the facts proved out. He stayed.

When Father Flanagan died in 1948, Boys Town was in the midst of a vast building program. We completed that program, doubling the available facilities. Today, the Boys Town high school provides facilities for 600 boys; the grade school, which starts with the fifth grade, handles 300. Entrance ages range from 10 to 16. We have 25 large cottages, four "apartment houses" for younger boys, 900 acres of farm land, a 60-acre vegetable garden, gymnasiums, swimming pools, recreation areas, and chapels.

But despite our greater size and scope, there is no institutionalizing. We are not an institution but a family, a home of love. Our program is not one of correction but of prevention, not of conformity but of building character.

If Father Flanagan could come back today, he would find that other homes patterned after Boys Town have sprung up throughout the world. Delegations frequently visit Boys Town to study the principles and methods he put into effect.

They have heard of the triumphant records of our 10,000 graduates before and since Father Flanagan's death. And they know that his techniques—love; care; guidance; moral, mental, and spiritual training for manhood—still provide a realistic answer to the problems that beset us today.

How typical is the housewife who says, "Spending money is my hobby"? Here, an expert on family finances delves into this fascinating subject

A STOCK CARTOON CHARACTER is a plump, glassy-eyed, flighty matron returning home from a shopping spree laden with parcels. Everyone smiles at her consuming passion for spending—except her husband, who is one jump ahead of the sheriff.

Is there a sound basis for this image of the American housewife as an irresponsible spendthrift, a "moron about money"? Or is the chronically extravagant wife a myth, one of the harshest canards of our time?

Let's first look at some of the charges leveled against American housewives.

In a depth study in Chicago last year by Social Research, Inc., women whose husbands earn from $8,000 to $15,000 made these devastating comments: "I love to spend money. I am always looking for something to buy. I think that's what money is for."

"I don't care to deny myself anything because you never know whether you're going to wake up in the morning."

"I feel that what is good for me is good for my husband, and spending money is my hobby."

"Money is just paper. We could have a war tomorrow, and then where would we be?"

In Detroit, when a man asked for a divorce on the grounds that his wife was extravagant, the court ruled against him. "If wifely extravagance were grounds for divorce," said the judge, "half the marriages in this country would be over before they were fairly started."

In New York, a probing reporter found that, in shops where dresses cost as high as $500, many women pay partly in cash. When the bill arrives, their husbands don't know how much actually was spent for the dress.

Psychiatrists, too, encounter the phenomenon of the prodigal woman. Dr. Eleanor Crissey, psychiatrist at Cornell Medical School, has asserted that the emotional problems of the spendthrift are related to those of the chronic alcoholic or gambler.

By and large, when a woman overspends, it is in a specific area. The "clotheshorse" is a familiar type. Some wives splurge on luxury foods, others on kitchen gadgets. A suburbanite may go on a redecorating binge whenever her husband receives a raise. Unmarried working women are apt to be extravagant on personal jewelry and beauty preparations.

Many mothers overspend only for their children. I believe this is because the average American woman has high aspirations for her youngsters, and she wants them to have the material things she was denied as a child. Also prevalent is the self-inflicted pressure to keep up with the Joneses' offspring.

Now for a Fair Appraisal

Thus far, I may have conveyed the impression that wifely extravagance is widespread. Emphatically, this is not so. From reports of members of the National Committee for Education in Family Finance across the country, it is clear that the vast majority of American women are determined to live within their family income.

Remember, most girls take home-economics courses (including instruction in family finances), while boys usually do not receive such training. After marriage, women tend to have a thriftier attitude toward money and to be more critical in their approach to decisions affecting the use of family earnings.

The average middle-income woman is actually an astute shopper. She is highly concerned with quality and value and takes time before buying. For a major item, she may go to six or eight stores, much to the annoyance of her impatient husband.

She usually is better informed than her husband on brand differences, fabric quality, etc. She is likely to go to the trouble to read up on differences and discuss them with friends, relatives, and neighbors. When it comes to appliances —the tools of her job at home—she will get the benefit of her neighbors' experience with them, question dealers in detail, and consult consumer publications.

Are American Women $pendthrifts?

By HEROLD C. HUNT, ED. D.
Professor of Education, Harvard University;
Chairman, National Committee for Education in Family Finance

with Theodore Irwin

"Women spend money like conservative trustees in charge of someone else's money," the head of a leading chain of department stores once pointed out. "Men's participation in shopping is growing, for which we are duly thankful. It has been demonstrated over and over again that sales checks go up when Father goes along."

Most women tend to adhere closely to their shopping lists. One survey by a Philadelphia marketing consultant found that, although women are inclined to pick up "bargains," these items usually fit into the family's needs.

When an American housewife needs extra money for something she has her heart set on, several choices are open to her. On the basis of a Chicago poll, two out of five save out of household expenses, one out of five has a little nest egg put aside, one in four asks her husband for the money, and the remainder either go out and work for it or skimp on luxury foods.

Wild shopping flings? Certainly they are uncommon. It is in big cities, where a housewife is cloaked in anonymity, that she is apt to be flagrantly overindulgent. In small- or medium-sized communities, her friends and neighbors are a built-in brake on spending—for word of financial indiscretions gets around fast in such places.

On the rare occasions when a homemaker does go on a "buying spree," it may be after a windfall or an emotional upset. Sometimes a domestic quarrel will trigger it as a form of economic retribution to punish the husband. Such compulsive buying is likely to be a temporary aberration, however, with subsequent remorse and penny-pinching.

Regret and reform are also evidenced by women who make intemperate status-seeking purchases to keep up with the Joneses. This often happens in the first two years after a family moves to a new suburban community. After having experimented for a while with that expensive social pastime, the average suburban wife realizes it is a waste of money and energy, mends her ways, and settles down to sensible spending.

Sociologists tell us that women tend to be more security-conscious than men. Women have strong feelings about long-range goals involving large sums of money, such as for buying a home, life insurance, or setting funds aside for the college education of the children. Perhaps this is because wives tend to outlive their husbands. But whatever the reason, the fiscal conservatism of women is recognized by credit managers of banks and finance companies, who are more willing to lend money if the wife is a cosigner.

Not unusual is the experience of a young salesman I know. "In the first five years of my marriage," he told me, "we didn't save a dollar. But after I turned over all our bills and budgeting to my wife, she managed to save $3,000 in a year and a half! I still marvel at how she did it."

Some Splurging May Be Justified

Of course, often what appears to be splurging is legitimate spending. I do not consider it extravagant, for example, for a wife to entertain lavishly if it is important in furthering her husband's career. Also, spending more on a girl's clothes may be necessary if it helps her to fit more comfortably into her social environment.

Certainly there is nothing wrong in a woman indulging herself at times—provided she remains basically in control of her available funds. The true spendthrift is one who habitually buys without plan, acquires more than she needs, and runs up debts she knows her husband can't afford.

How can a homemaker avoid falling into the spendthrift pattern? One safety check is for both husband and wife to agree not to buy anything over $25 or $50 without first consulting their mate. A joint checking account also would apprise the man of the house how much was spent each month and for what.

Most important, there should be a family council at which the couple (along with the children if they are old enough) sits down and realistically allocates funds for fixed expenses and discretionary outlays. Family goals—whether they are for a vacation, a new car, or education—should be decided upon. If the lady of the house respects the family program, she won't turn out to be a spendthrift.

Every family has its own preferences as to recreation, food, clothing, and other budget categories. Depending on whether a family wants to eat hamburgers in a fine home or steak in an adequate house, anywhere from 20 to 35 percent of the family income can go for shelter. A person with a $12,000 income generally will spend a smaller percentage of his earnings for clothes and more for entertainment than a family with a $6,000 income.

Still, the following sample formula may be helpful to get you started, to stimulate your thinking about your own spending, and to guide you as to what to include in your finance plan.

For a family with two small children, on take-home pay of about $7,000, this is how expenditures might be allocated:

Food and beverages	27%
Housing	20%
Clothing and upkeep	9%
Transportation (car and fares)	9%
Medical and dental care	8%
Insurance	5%
Household operation	4%
Furnishings	3%
Recreation and entertainment	3%
Contributions and gifts	2%
Personal care	2%
Personal expenses (tobacco, etc.)	2%
Advancement (reading, education)	1%
Union dues	1%
Savings	4%

Obviously, adjustments should be made to fit your own family's goals. The trend is for American families to spend less for such necessities as food and clothing and a larger share of income for education, medical care, and recreation. Because paychecks have increased in the past decade, more money is left over for discretionary spending—a temptation to the free spender.

Today more than ever, the tendency—especially in middle-income homes—is for the housewife to assume responsibility for managing the family funds and bills. Despite the spendthrift exceptions you hear about, American women usually do a fine job of it.

JERRY LEWIS

He Gets Better with Defeat

His recent television fiasco has only strengthened him as a performer—and relaxed him as an individual

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

JERRY LEWIS suggested I meet him in San Diego, where he was spending six leisurely weeks on board his luxurious yacht, "The Pussycat," while editing his latest film, "The Patsy."

But instead of being at ease when I arrived, he was tense and depressed: he had just returned from Los Angeles where he had attended the funeral of his close friend, actor Peter Lorre.

"At times like this," Jerry observed sadly, "all the wisdom and philosophy about how to live with grief don't amount to a bag of beans. You lose someone close to you, and you must make up your own mind that this is the way it is—period. I learned that the hard way."

Actually, Jerry has learned to live with losses and defeats as few people I know. He gives credit for this to his grandmother, who meant more to him in his youth than anyone—including his parents, who were usually out of town trying to make a living as entertainers.

"After my grandmother died," he told me, "I thought nothing and no one would ever matter any more.

"Actually, had my grandmother gone on living," Jerry continued, "I would not be as successful as I am. I had to do well because she was an inspiration to me. She always told me there was nothing I couldn't do. And whenever I felt bad, whenever I felt disappointed, I remembered those words."

Among the disappointments was his split with Dean Martin in 1956 after working together 10 years.

"Dean was like the big brother I never had. Professionally and personally, we were like Siamese twins," Jerry explained.

After the split with Dino, it was a combination of a friend's illness, his wife Patti's persistence, and Jerry's own resilience that finally revitalized his belief in himself as an entertainer on his own.

Jerry, Patti, his publicist Jack Keller, and Jack's wife had gone to Las Vegas on a short vacation to help pull Jerry out of his miseries. "After four days," Jack remembers, "we packed our bags to fly home, but Judy Garland's husband, Sid Luft, came to see Jerry. Judy was then appearing at the Stardust and having one of her periodic throat ailments. Sid pleaded with Jerry to fill in for Judy that night. Jerry asked what I thought, and I told him he was a fool to accept because he had no act.

" 'I think I can fool everybody for an hour,' Jerry insisted. Two hours later — in a borrowed tuxedo — he faced an audience alone for the first time in years.

"The show was probably the best Jerry ever did. There was only one flaw. Jerry had nothing to close with. In desperation he leaned down to orchestra leader Jack Cathcart and asked, 'What does Judy sing when she goes off?'

"Jack rattled off a lot of Judy's numbers. Jerry knew the lyrics of only one—'Rock-a-bye Your Baby,' and this is what he sang, à la Jolson, down on his knees, arms outstretched. When it was over, the audience stood up and roared."

But it was Patti who managed to shove Jerry into further activities. "I would like to ask you a favor," she said after the show.

Jerry was elated. "Ask anything."

"I would like you to record that number for me."

He did, and gave Patti the master record. She played it for arranger Sonny Burke, who put it into circulation. It sold three million records —and Jerry had launched a new career for himself.

Jerry's biggest professional disappointment, however, was the humiliating demise of his recent television show. I was among the 2,000 guests who had been invited to a champagne dinner at the Hilton Hotel to witness the initial program on giant tv screens, and then watched Jerry make his grand entrance accompanied by 60-some fiddlers. The whole evening turned into one of my most embarrassing experiences in Hollywood, for it was apparent to everyone that the show was a bust.

THERE WERE extenuating circumstances, at least as far as Jerry's own responsibility was concerned, but they were not known then. It was only after the cancellation of the show that one of Jerry's close associates told me Jerry had fired off a 10-page, single-spaced letter to his bosses at ABC complaining about things that had gone wrong which were beyond his control: such as the inability of half the audience to see the stage; the air conditioning quitting shortly after the opening of one show on one of the hottest nights of the year; unexpected guests being pushed into camera range—some of them completely unsuited for such exposure; and commercial interruptions slicing right through Jerry's monologues.

Nevertheless, Jerry admitted, "I can't blame the failure of the show on anyone but myself. I made some basic mistakes—such as doing the show live against the advice of almost everyone."

But even though he had failed, Jerry proved again that he could take it. The Monday after his show went off the air, he took out full-page ads in the Hollywood trade papers which said, "Oops!" and were signed "Jerry."

Jerry had learned from experience that idleness is the worst way to get over a setback, so he jumped into so many activities that he had no time to feel sorry for himself. He scheduled three pictures for this year. What little free time was left, he devoted to an avalanche of hobbies, including a $250,000 investment in an incredible stereo room for his Bel-Air home.

He bought an interest in an FM station in the San Fernando Valley and had a direct line hooked up so that he could sit in his stereo room and, by simply punching a button, indicate to the station that he was ready to cut into the existing program in typical Lewis fashion.

Once he introduced dinner guest George Jessel as the ambassador from Israel, and they did Yiddish bits together. Another time he introduced Pat Boone as Elvis Presley, and Pat promptly obliged by loosening the strings of his guitar to accompany his intentionally off-key voice! And before long, the demise of his tv show was only an unpleasant memory.

In his personal life, Jerry has been more fortunate. He met Patti when both appeared at a Detroit theater—she singing with Ted Fiorito's band, he doing pantomimes to records. They were married in October, 1944, when Jerry was 18.

Their first son, Gary, was born two years later, and Jerry considered himself the luckiest husband in the world. "I'm happy only when there's a baby around the house," he once told me. "I know what it means to be brought up without brothers and sisters. As long as I can afford it, we will always have a baby. Ultimately, Patti and I hope to have 15 to 20 children."

But nature seemed against them. After Patti gave birth to Gary, she was told she could have no more children. "So we adopted a child," Jerry said. And that's how Ronnie joined the Lewis clan. But to their delight, surgery corrected Patti's condition, and other children came along. Gary is now 18, Ronnie 14, Scott Anthony, 8, Christopher Joseph, 6, Anthony Joseph, 4, and baby Joseph Christopher was born last January.

All along, Jerry wanted a daughter. His motto before starting his ill-fated tv show—at the time, Patti was several months pregnant—was blatantly stated in the trade papers: "Think Pink" and signed "Jerry." The theme of his opening television show was "Think Pink." Hoping positive thinking would get proper results, he had the new nursery decorated in pink, and a little pink dress, cape, and bonnet hung in the delivery room!

When Jerry was told that Patti had given birth to yet another boy, a shadow of disappointment fell across his face. It lasted only a second. "Well, it's a nice healthy baby," he cried out and hugged the nurse who gave him the news.

Now Jerry and Patti have decided to adopt another child—a girl. "We will get her some time this summer," he told me enthusiastically.

As Jerry talked about the new addition to the family, showed me pictures, and gave me a guided tour of his 46-foot yacht, his old energy bounced back and his low-key mood faded away.

Even a couple of years ago, it would have been out of the question for Jerry to relax for even an hour. "All my hobbies were tied in with my work. This boat is my first non-professional hobby, and I love it." He failed to mention that he bought it after his doctor told him that if he didn't learn how to slow down, he might not be around much longer to enjoy any hobby. At the time, it was presumed that Jerry had suffered a coronary, but a spokesman insists, "It was really a severe case of hypertension."

He spent more than $100,000 on "The Pussycat," which has two bedrooms, a salon, two bathrooms, and four tv sets. The boat has more instrument panels than a rocket-launching site, including electronic devices from radar to electric fishing tackle which enables Jerry to haul in marlin with the push of a button. "Just think," Jerry said with mounting enthusiasm, "when I was 10, I flunked geography because I didn't know where the water was. And now I can navigate this boat anywhere."

THE DAY he bought the yacht, one of the builder's engineers offered to move it to the slip. But Jerry, whose sole experience with boats had been restricted to a tiny speedboat, said no thanks. A couple of hundred relatives, friends, and curious bystanders lined up to watch Jerry smash his new boat right through the pier—but he maneuvered it expertly into place.

Map reading was a bit more difficult at first. Neither Jerry nor Patti will ever forget the night they were returning from Newport, 60 miles north of San Diego. At the time, Jerry was as inexperienced in reading charts as in determining drifts. To make matters worse, he had two hi-fi speakers mounted in the forward section, and these threw off the magnetic compass. "Before I knew what happened, I'd passed San Diego and continued clear into Mexican waters," he says. His frantic short-wave appeal brought a Coast Guard cutter to his rescue.

About 5 o'clock, Jerry was called to the conference room of the Kona Kai Yacht Club to attend his daily film-editing session. "I'm needed only an hour a day," Jerry told me. "The rest of the time I can devote to puttering around the boat. It's a great way to live."

Obviously, Jerry Lewis has proved he can live not only with his own health problems but through professional disappointments and personal tragedies—and come out a better, happier man.

The Lewises on "The Pussycat"—top, Ronnie, 14, Jerry, Gary, 18; bottom, Scott, 8, Anthony, 4, Patti, and Christopher, 6. Baby Joseph has since been added.

Wiglet on a Summer Wave

By ROSALYN ABREVAYA

NOW, DURING the predictable heat of summer, when your hair fashions itself into a familiar, graceful droop, take it in hand with a superb cut—and add a wiglet for versatile styling. The two, cleverly combined, make a wonderful warm-weather duo after you've spent hours in the briny deep or for the morning after a late night on the town.

Mr. Carl of Wig City in New York—specialists in fitting, styling, and servicing wigs and hairpieces—suggests a short haircut (left) about five inches long on top and sides, then layered in back to two inches. With this casual, easy-to-manage cut, he shows the marvelous ways to style a wiglet.

Using the same basic six-roller set for each wiglet—four medium-sized rollers placed straight back and one on each side with the hair rolled under—Mr. Carl creates three distinctly different hairdos perfect for morning, afternoon, and evening.

Then, forget your hair and settle down to a magical summer free of the yearly hairdo hassle.

For a look inspired by Chanel, the wiglet is combed into large soft curls and placed at the nape of the neck. Your own hair turns under at sides with bangs smooth in front.

Napoleon's Josephine would have envied this coif. The wiglet is now placed at the crown in a cascade of puffed swirls, your hair brushed into full bangs, large cheek curls.

If you like your hairdos straight with a hint of curl at sides, pin your own bangs back; place wiglet at the crown, then brush forward and comb rest of wiglet into hair.

Buying a Food Freezer?

BUY FOOD SECURITY!

BUY A FRIGIDAIRE FREEZER!

Hundreds of dollars worth of meat, fruit and vegetables will go into the food freezer you buy. So you need the sure knowledge that your freezer has the quality, features and built-in performance that can mean food security. Food security—that's what you get—with every Frigidaire freezer.

Who else could know as much about refrigeration? Who else has quality features like these for years and years of quiet, reliable zero-zone cold . . . years and years of food security.

REAL FOOD PROTECTION Frigidaire insulation is specially installed to prevent "warm spots" which can result in costly food spoilage. And the seal around the door edges has a continuous magnet built in to insure tighter door closing.

LOW OPERATING COSTS Every Frigidaire freezer has the Meter-Miser, one of the most efficient types of refrigerating devices ever invented. And every model has the Frigidaire Non-Clog condenser which never clogs with dirt or lint, never needs cleaning, never uses extra electricity to overcome a clogged condition.

STURDIER CONSTRUCTION Cabinet corners are reinforced for extra strength. Doors are cross-braced inside to help prevent warp and to help keep them tight and true for years.

FAST, FACTORY-TRAINED SERVICE It's unlikely that your Frigidaire freezer will ever need servicing, but it's reassuring to know that there are factory trained servicemen throughout the country.

Party Pancakes

MELANIE DE PROFT, Food Editor

A close-up of Chicken-Rice Pancakes Nectarine as served at a lovely summer luncheon.

Chicken-Rice Pancakes Nectarine

1 cup pancake mix
1 can condensed chicken-rice soup
1 egg, well beaten
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted and cooled

1. Combine ingredients and beat with a rotary beater until dry ingredients are barely moistened.
2. For each pancake, pour about 3 tablespoons batter onto a hot, lightly greased griddle or skillet. Bake pancakes until puffy and full of bubbles. Turn and lightly brown other side.
3. Serve hot with Nectarine Sauce and small-curd, cream-style cottage cheese (see photo).

Nectarine Sauce

Combine 2 cups sliced fresh nectarines, ½ cup sugar, and 2 tablespoons water in a saucepan; mix gently. Bring to boiling, reduce heat, and simmer 5 to 10 min., or until nectarines are heated.

Swedish Pancakes

1½ cups sifted flour
3 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted and cooled

1. Blend the first three ingredients in a bowl.
2. Beat the eggs until thick and piled softly. Blend in the milk and melted butter. Combine egg mixture with the dry ingredients and beat with rotary beater until smooth.
3. For each pancake, spoon 1 tablespoon batter into each round of a greased heated platt pan (Swedish pancake pan available in the housewares section of most department stores). Or if using a griddle or skillet, form pancakes about 3 in. in diameter. Bake over medium heat until lightly browned on bottom. Loosen edges with a spatula, turn, and lightly brown other side.
4. As pancakes are baked, transfer them to a heated plate. Arrange pancakes in a circle, slightly overlapping each other. In center, serve preserved lingonberries.

5 doz. 3-in. pancakes

German Apple Pancakes

¼ cup butter or margarine
3 small, firm cooking apples, cored, pared, and thinly sliced (about 2½ cups)
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
4 eggs
⅓ cup milk
½ cup sifted flour
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
Confectioners' sugar

1. Heat the ¼ cup butter in a 10-in. skillet; add the apple slices, cover, and cook over medium heat until apples are almost tender, turning slices several times during cooking. When almost tender, sprinkle a mixture of the 2 tablespoons sugar and the cinnamon evenly over apples. Continue cooking, uncovered, until apples are just tender. Turn into a bowl and keep warm.
2. Beat the eggs until thick and piled softly; blend in the milk.
3. Add a mixture of the next three ingredients and beat with a rotary beater until smooth.
4. Add 3 tablespoons of the butter to the skillet and heat until moderately hot.
5. Pour in enough batter to cover bottom of skillet. Spoon about one-half of the apple mixture evenly over batter. Pour in just enough batter to cover apples. Bake pancake over medium heat until golden brown on bottom. Loosen edges with spatula; carefully turn and brown other side.
6. When pancake is baked, remove skillet from heat and brush pancake generously with melted butter. Roll up and transfer to a warm serving platter. Sift confectioners' sugar over the top. Keep pancake hot. Repeat procedure with remaining batter and apples.

2 apple pancakes

Hungarian Filled Pancakes

1 cup sifted flour
1½ teaspoons sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
Nut Filling (see recipe)
2 cups dairy sour cream

1. Blend the flour, sugar, and salt in a bowl.
2. Beat the egg slightly and blend in the milk and extract. Combine the egg mixture with the dry ingredients and beat with rotary beater until smooth.
3. For each pancake, pour 2 to 2½ tablespoons batter (enough to cover bottom of skillet) into a heated lightly greased skillet; immediately tilt skillet back and forth to spread batter thinly and evenly. (Batter should be very thin at all times so that it will spread easily. Stir in a small amount of additional milk from time to time because the batter will thicken on standing.)
4. Bake pancake over medium heat until lightly browned on bottom. Loosen edges with spatula. Turn and brown other side; invert onto a warm plate. Repeat with remainder of batter, greasing skillet lightly for each pancake.
5. As each pancake is baked, spread pancake lightly with melted butter and top with 2 tablespoons of the filling. Roll up and place in a buttered shallow baking dish (about 13 x 9 x 2 in.).
6. Spoon the sour cream evenly over the filled and rolled pancakes.
7. Bake uncovered at 350°F 25 to 30 min., or until thoroughly heated.

14 to 16 filled pancakes

Nut Filling

Mix together thoroughly 2 cups walnuts (1 cup grated and 1 cup coarsely chopped), 1 cup seedless raisins, ½ cup sugar, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, and 2 teaspoons grated lemon peel.

Sunday Chef

My spouse can name the kinds of food
That taste their best when barbecued.
He knows what makes the fuels ignite;
Reveals what temperatures are right.
On grills and spits he'll loose a speech
And name the special points of each.
And implements—without a hitch
He'll tell you what is done by which.
His knowledge is immense! I must Admit that I'm impressed. There's just
One thing (poor dear!) he's overlooking:
He doesn't have a knack for cooking.

—Judy Michaels

Quips and Quotes

The summer-camp teacher was trying to explain to her preschool tots the concept of distance. "For example," she said, "some of you live close to camp—a few blocks. Others live far—miles, perhaps. Now, Johnny, can you tell me whether you live near or far?"

The little boy thought a moment, then answered: "I think I must live close because every time I come home, my mother says, 'Good grief, are you home already?'"

—Gladys Birch

You don't have to be an old-timer to remember the days when Grandpa worked his 200-acre farm with less equipment than his descendant uses for his suburban lawn. —Anna Herbert

The showman was dead set against dog acts but reluctantly agreed to audition one. The dog hopped on a piano and played a Chopin prelude while directing the orchestra with his tail. The showman was amazed and signed a $2,500-a-week contract with the dog's agent.

After weeks of worldwide publicity, the theater was packed on opening night. Out came the dog. He hopped on the bench and played the piano thrillingly, all the while directing the orchestra with his tail. The crowd sat in awe—until another dog ran from the wings, grabbed the piano-playing dog by the scruff of the neck, and carried him off the stage.

"Good heavens," cried the showman. "Who was that?"

"That," sighed the dog's agent, "was his mother—she wants him to be a doctor."

Fellow Travelers

Children riding in a car
Are very likely to go far:
From back to front and front to back,
They climb and leave a sticky track.
They sidle, too, as on you ride,
From seat to floor, from side to side—
For every mile you drive, you see,
They always travel two or three.

—Richard Armour

"I couldn't help hearing you and your wife arguing last night," said a neighbor. "What was it all about?"

"Nothing," replied the harried husband.

"Nothing? All that noise over nothing?"

"That's right," the husband replied. "She asked me what I was getting her for her birthday, and I said, 'Nothing.'"

—F. G. Kernan
